QUIZ STIMSON ON NAVY ISSUE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (INS)—Secretary of War Stimson today told the House Foreign Affairs committee that President Roosevelt should have a free hand to send U. S. warships into any waters—belligerent or otherwise—which he deemed necessary, and that Congress should place no restrictions on the executive that would prevent such action.

Stimson recalled by the committee for further questioning on the vast power granted the President in the lease-lend bill, made his assertion during a heated exchange with Congressman George Holden Tinkham, Massachusetts Republican and long-time foe of the Administration's foreign policy.

"Is it your opinion that there sh ld be no prohibition in this bi'l against sending American warships into belligerent waters?" asked Tinkham.

"Yes, that is my opinion," replied Stimson. "Most certainly no o ie can foresee what situation might arise and make it most essential in the light of defense—not offense—to send our war-ships into belligerent waters."

OUT OF ORDER

Tinkham asked Stimson if he favored maintaining peace.

"Yes, but I am also in favor of our remaining in a state of complete readiness to meet any emergency if it should be forced," replied Stimson.

"Do you think our warships should convoy ships to England?" asked Tinkham.

"There is nothing in the bill with regard to that," replied Stimson.

"I'd like to have the chairman rule whether I should discuss it."

Over protest of Tinkham and Rep. Fish (D.) of New York, Bloom ruled the question out of order.

REFUSES TO ANSWER

Stimson refused to tell Tinkham under what conditions he would favor offensive action.

"I don't think the country should tie its right hand behind its back, even to war," replied Stimson. "I think that would be one of the surest ways of getting us into war."

Earlier, Stimson characterized as "fantastic and preposterous" published stories that the measure was deliberately designed to give President Roosevelt power to buy the British navy if Britain fails, and to permit operation of British warships from American ports.

"I never heard of such a suggestion," replied Stimson to Tinkham's questioning, which had included a query as to whether Mr. Roosevelt could buy remnants of the French navy.

"Do you consider it could be done under the bill?" demanded Tinkham rising to his feet.

"I have not considered it in that light," replied Stimson. "I consider that one of those fantastic and preposterous suggestions such as that the President might give away the navy."

Mr. Tinkham's question probably was based on controversial

Wheeler Asks FD To Reveal Reports Of Kennedy, Bullitt

By STANLEY CARROLL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (INS)—Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D.) of Montana, after an hour's visit with Joseph P. Kennedy, American ambassador to Great Britain, challenged President Roosevelt to make public reports from Kennedy and former ambassador to France William C. Bullitt.

Kennedy, whose resignation has not yet been officially accepted by the President, had conferred earlier with the Chief Executive, Secretary of State Hull, and Undersecretary of State Welles.

Following these conferences Kennedy announced he would make a radio address tomorrow night on the nation's foreign policy, "with the accent on staying out of war."

Asked whether his speech would deal with the President's lend-lease bill, Kennedy replied he "might touch upon the legislation, but the proposed bill is incidental to my chief concern—that of keeping the country out of war."

ALREADY WRITTEN

He said the speech already had been written, and he didn't expect to change it "as a result of my conversations today."

A short time after he returned to his hotel, Wheeler, whose radio attack upon the Administration bill last Sunday was denounced by President Roosevelt Tuesday as "untruthful," "dastardly" and "unpatriotic," called, and spent an hour closeted with the ambassador.

Kennedy hurried from the hotel a few minutes later and left for New York. Wheeler insisted his visit had been merely a social one, that he had known Kennedy for a long time, and called merely to pay his respects. But it was after his visit to Kennedy that Wheeler said:

"I challenge the President to make public the reports of Mr. Kennedy and Ambassador Bullitt, which began with before war was declared in Europe and before the invasion of Poland, down to the present time.

"I feel confident that if the President gives the Bullitt reports, then Mr. Kennedy's reports, the American people will be in a better position to give the lend-lease bill intelligent consideration.

"If he does not want these reports to be made public, he could give them to the Senate in executive session, or to the foreign relations committee in executive session.

"There is no reason why the American people should not have the facts as our ambassadors viewed them.

"It would also show whether or not the so-called 'White Paper' carried out of Poland was correct or false, and whether or not our ambassadors are urging a declaration of war or whether we should stay out of it."

The "White Paper" to which Wheeler referred was published by the German government after the fall of Warsaw. It purported to disclose documents seized in the Polish foreign office, including one in which Count Jerzy Potocki, then Polish ambassador to the United States, and Bullitt discussed possible entry of the United States into the war.

'WE'LL FINISH IT'

In the "White Paper," Potocki was quoted as asking Bullitt whether the United States would get into the war. Bullitt was quoted as replying:

"Not at the beginning, but we'll finish it."

Both Bullitt and Potocki branded the report as a "pure fabrication"

Rookies of Camp Hulen Eagerly Await Tests in Anti-Aircraft

This is the fifth of a series of articles by Austen Lake, American staff correspondent visiting the 211th Coast Artillery (First Corps Cadets) in training at Camp Hulen, Texas.

By AUSTEN LAKE

CAMP HULEN, Texas, Jan. 17—By mid-morning the batteries set up their guns on the beach, spraddled like huge spiders on their shock-absorbing mounts and waiting for the uncertain moment when a Hulen airplane would fly overhead, dragging a cigar-shaped "sleeve" at the end of a 3000 foot tow line.

No firing yet! Just "calibrating" practice, sight-adjusting and imaginary spot shooting in collaboration with the stereoscopic height finders.

Two weeks of this before cases of big brass shells with steel projectiles and adjustable, explosive noses arrive from the ordnance wing of Camp Hulen. Expensive stuff that, running into hundreds of dollars per shot, but required in the costly, lamentable business of war.

IMITATION GAME

Not before January 22 will the first battalion's gunners feed shells into the maws of their guns, clamp down the breaches and send the initial bursts screaming aloft to make series of powder puff dots in the sky—white smoke smudges which would bracket the target in stippled lines, shrapnel bursts in this imitation game, for high explosive is too expensive.

"The boys are crazy to make their first trial shots," Col. Hall said significantly "That's action."

Do the men wish they were at war and verging on that nerve-

PORTO ALEGRE, Brazil, Jan. 17 (AP)—Trailed by a British cruiser, the French freighter Mendoza was reported moving slowly northward today safely inside Brazilian territorial waters.

Loaded with a cargo of food for blockaded France, the Mendoza idled for several hours at the port of Rio Grande last night and then resumed her cautious journey.

Bomb Kills 45 London Sleepers

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP)—Rescue suads digging through the ruins of a bombed workingmen's hostel—a four-story building where men bought what they hoped would be a night's sleep for 15 or 20 cents—removed seven more bodiee today, bringing to a total of 45 the number believed to have died in a Nazi blast from the skies.

The hostel—which was more like an American rooming house than a hotel—crumbled after a direct hit Wednesday night.

Laboring under screened lights through last night unmindful of two air raid alarms, the firemen and soldiers rescuers took 45 of the trapped men alive from the wreckage before the ruins became silent — indicating the remainder were dead or too badly hurt to cry out.

The blast was so tremendous it did not leave a brick in place.

Most of the survivors were taken out yesterday but the rescuers kept at their work all last night.

Man, Woman Sought In Kidnaping of Baby

Boston police today were ordered to "bring in" a Brighton man and a Dorchester young woman in connection with the kidnaping and abandonment of 13-months-old Joan Marie Havlin, found lying in a Dorchester snowbank at the height of a sleet storm last night.

MRS. MARY HAVLIN AND DAUGHTER, JOAN

Baby Back in Crib From Which She Was Kidnaped

Capt. Francis M. Tiernan of the Fields Corner station issued the order after police had questioned every neighbor within blocks of the place where the baby was found.

Officers had been told that the man and the young woman had been seen in an automobile in the neighborhood a half-hour before little Joan, only a few days out of the hospital, was found in the driving, freezing rain.

PNEUMONIA FEARED

At her home in Claybourne st., meanwhile, the infant was under the care of a doctor who ordered that she be kept in bed until it could be determined whether she had contracted pneumonia from her exposure o the weather.

RICHARD SHEEHAN

Joan was saved from death by Richard Sheehan, 14, of Tonawanda st., Dorchester, who found her clad only in a thin blanket and night dress, propped in the snow against the garage in the rear of the Sheehan home.

Whether her abductors became panicky after snatching the baby from her crib in her home and abandoned her, or whether they deliberately left her in the storm to kill her, police had not yet determined.

The Sheehan home is three blocks from the home of the baby's mother, Mrs. Mary Havlin, 25, who is separated from her husband. She told police the baby had been released from Boston City Hospital four days after an operation for mastoid.

While setting out some laundry bags on his back porch, Richard heard the cries of the baby. Obtaining a flashlight, he investigated and found her on the snow-covered apron of the garage with her hair and face damp from the driving sleet and rain.

Richard's mother, wife of a deputy collector of internal revenue, said after bundling the child up and telephoning police who restored her to her mother:

"The poor darling really was sick. She had nothing on but a flimsy night dress and a light bed blanket. She was coughing with a croupy sound."

Police investigation centered partly around the clues furnished by young Richard, who said that while he was examining a woman's footprints near the scene a mysterious automobile drove by.

Mrs. Havlin said the child vanished from her crib on the second floor while she had gone to a neighboring store to make a purchase. In the home at the time were her mother, Mrs. Winifred Cuneo Havlin, 60, and her brother, Andrew, and a second child Denise, three.

Returning home, she said she found the window to the child's bedroom open and Joan gone from her crib.

THREATENING MESSAGE

Mrs. Havlin told police she received a threatening message about a week ago from a man as well as several telephone calls from a woman describing herself as a Brighton.

Except for the extra precautions she was taking to see that the sick baby was sleeping well, Mrs. Havlin said, the disappearance might have escaped notice for several hours.

Mrs. Havlin said she believed the kidnaper used a ladder to reach the bedroom window. But police were unable to find any tracks or marks in the new fallen snow.

12 DIE IN AIR CRASH

BUDAPEST, Jan. 17 (AP)—N... passengers and three members of the crew were killed today when an airliner crashed near Nagyvarad airdrome. Four other persons were injured.

Confesses Kidnaping Of Harvard Bride

Captured through another woman's nerve, a 20-year-old Somerville youth confessed today, according to Cambridge police, to the long investigated kidnaping and attack of pretty Jeanne Earle, 21, bride of a Harvard Law School senior.

The youth also signed a confession, police said, to 17 burglaries in Cambridge as part of his one-man crime wave that began last fall.

Mrs. G. Diederich

He was captured last night on a Cambridge street through a description furnished by Mrs. Gertrude Wylie Diederich, 25, who had screamed and frightened him away after he attempted to hold her up with a revolver as she parked her car at the rear of her home in Holden Green, Cambridge.

"LOOKS LIKE KIDNAPER"

A Simmons College graduate, Mrs. Earle, viewed a lineup today at Cambridge police headquarters and indicated the Somerville youth as a man who "looked like" the kidnaper who forced her to drive her car to Stoneham, then bound her with clothesline and attacked her.

The youth was called out of the lineup and allegedly confessed the attack. Mrs. Earle said she was convinced then that the suspect was her kidnaper.

To police the youth said he had been hearing about a stop-light bandit and decided that he would try it. He said he tried it first in Boston, but when he slid into the car of a woman who had stopped for a light she jumped out the other door.

TIED WITH CLOTHESLINE

The youth leaped out the door and ran behind a block of stores, where he hid for a while, then took a cab to Harvard sq., Cambridge.

From there, he said, he walked to Everett st. and saw a young woman just getting into a car. He jumped in and thrust a revolver into her side, he said, told her police were after him and ordered her to drive him.

He said he directed her to Stone-

FIFTH DAY OF SLIMMING SAGA:

I felt just like the new world's champ this morning, because I won a hard-fought victory.

First, I stayed away from the party yesterday. I sat at my typewriter accomplishing nothing, while my natural inclinations battled with my higher self.

"It will do you good to have a little fun, and you can refuse tid-bits and you can have a demi-tasse instead of a cocktail. Besides, you'll probably get invited to the opening," said that little demon inside.

"You know darn well you won't stick to black coffee, and that you'll probably get invited out to a two-dollar dinner which you certainly won't refuse, and then you'll put off dieting until tomorrow," said my higher self.

H. S. won. I didn't go.

REWARD COMES

My reward came this morning. Two pounds off!

I tipped the scales at 126, three pounds less than I weighed when I paid my first visit to the gym. Three pounds a week is the maximum loss the doctor advised, and I've already accomplished it.

I might report at this point that

VOLUNTEER LIST EXHAUSTED, DRAFTEES TO FILL 3D QUOTA

Definite word that actual drafting on a wholesale scale would be resorted to in February came today after official issuance of the third draft call under which the Bay State will furnish 3198 more young men.

The volunteer list was exhausted in filling the second call just ended, it was explained.

Throughout New England, a total of 5020 men will report for final examinations beginning Feb. 6 in the third call as directed by Maj.-Gen. James A. Woodruff, First Corps Area commander.

Boston's 27 draft boards, which furnished 314 men in the second call, are called upon to select 600 for the latest call.

Still, New England's third quota falls far short of the number Army men had expected to call for one year's military training.

CONSTRUCTION DELAY

Delay in construction of adequate medical facilities in the State's military camps was responsible for the change in plans.

I will not order one man to the colors for whom there is not adequate hospital facilities in actual operation," Gen. Woodruff declared.

"We can take care of our present strength and the men called today, but no more at this time. I am proud that the health record of my command is one of the highest in the country and I intend to keep it so."

Meanwhile, ten examining boards continued their work of scrutinizing members of the Yankee Division called to the colors by the President and expected to begin movement to Camp Edwards within 10 days.

Gov. Saltonstall, appearing unexpectedly at the Commonwealth Armory, bade an official farewell to officers and men of the division which won undying fame during the World War.

BATTERY F OF THE 180TH FIELD ARTILLERY
Drilling at Commonwealth Armory Today

The chief executive said he was proud of them and that he felt confident they would uphold the honor and dignity of the division and the State.

Maj.-Gen. Roger W. Eckfeldt, commanding, expressed belief he would not lose more than 180 men through failure to pass examinations.

ONLY 2 PER CENT UNFIT

"Since last November we have been preparing for this," said Gen. Eckfeldt, "streamlining the division and eliminating those men who we were sure would be unable to meet the physical requirements.

"The net result is that I doubt whether we will lose more than two per cent of the enlisted strength, or 180 men. As far as officers are concerned, I know of none that we expect to lose, although under the law of percentages there probably will be some."

The general said everyone in the outfit was elated at the prospect of being teamed with the streamlined First Division for training at Camp Edwards, as the old Yankee Division served with them overseas in the World War.

Many of the officers and staff of the 26th Division are veterans of the World War, so that the assignment ahead of them will not be altogether new.

At headquarters Gen. Eckfeldt received reports throughout the day from some 50 armories in other parts of the State where units of the division were being inducted. In each place men were being given physicial examinations by 10 boards of Army surgeons, while the necessary signing of reports and requisitions went on.

With the exception of the 101st Observation Squadron and the Tank Company, the division will move to Camp Edwards by trucks and trains between tomorrow and next Tuesday. The aviation unit will remain at East Boston Airport probably until spring, and the Tank Company will leave Feb. 3 for Ft. Meade, Md., to join two other National Guard outfits in forming the 191st Tank Battalion.

Death Toll Mounts On Icy Highways

Treacherous ice sheathed New England and the eastern seaboard today out of the snow, sleet and rain storm which brought a mounting toll of death and injury in its wake.

In Sturbridge, Henry W. Duquette, 32, of Fiskdale, lost his life when struck by a truck as he was adjusting chains on his car beside the icy highway. He was crushed between the two vehicles.

Henry A. Martell of Union st., Concord, suffered head injuries when a town of Concord snow plow he was backing into Main st. was struck by an automobile.

Also injured was the driver of this car, Chester S. Nickerson of Revere pl., Medford.

A check of the eastern states disclosed that the storm and ice conditions had left behind them at least 22 dead, with hundreds of injured.

Most seriously affected were Maryland with nine deaths, New York State with six, Pennsylvania with five and New Jersey with two.

Motor travel was made hazardous, telephone and power lines were snapped, as well as tree branches, and in the center of New York's Hell Gate bridge several hundred passengers were marooned for three hours aboard the Pilgrim, a New York to Boston train.

When ice-loaded overhead wires of the electrified system snapped, the train was brought to an abrupt halt above the East river, within sight of the lights of Manhattan.

Heat went off in the cars, although lights remained. Until a steam engine was sent to rescue them, passengers were served with hot coffee by the train crew.

Although local trains coming into Boston were mainly on time, the through trains were generally late.

At Waltham, water flooding Edison Co. mains washed out the police and fire signal systems twice during today, necessitating the use of the auxiliary systems until the trouble could be corrected.

Air traffic was cancelled when ice-coated runways, particularly at the LaGuardia Field terminal on the New York end, made landings and takeoffs hazardous.

Meanwhile more snow flurries and sleet were scheduled before the storm's end here tonight or tomorrow in another spell of biting cold.

Buffeted by high seas, the Coast Guard cutter Thetis searched off Nantucket for the missing New Bedford dragger William H. Killitrew, which sent radio distress signals at the height of the storm yesterday when its engines went dead.

Despite hours of searching, the Coast Guards found no trace of the vessel and fears increased for the safety of Capt. Ollie J. Olsen and his crew.

The tanker Allegheny advised that she would be 10 hours late arriving at Boston from Baltimore and Norfolk, and the freighter Wyoming, due here also, said she would be at least three hours late.

Heavy seas combined with the fog to keep many vessels at anchor near the Cape Cod entrances, and the mounting seas made it impossible for two Boston tugs that went to Beverly yesterday to return.

More than 50 Boston plows and sanding machines were in operation during the night, while 150 state crews worked to clear trunk highways.

STRICKEN—The theater adage or "the show must go on" today had been thwarted with the illness of Gertrude Lawrence, famed stage star, stricken in New York with the grippe. Her illness forced postponement of play's premiere.

Storm Closes Many Schools

Many schools throughout Greater Boston, including all those in the Boston public school system, were ordered closed today because of sloppy and icy streets.

While sessions were cancelled for the entire day in Boston, afternoon classes were scheduled for a few cities and towns.

Increases in the number of grippe cases were a contributing factor in the decision of several school superintendents to suspend classes for the day.

Communities in the Greater Boston area where schools were closed part or all of the day included, in addition to Boston:

Cambridge, Somerville, Stoneham, Natick, Reading, Winchester, Canton, Peabody, Melrose, Concord, Randolph, Avon, Holbrook, Framingham, Braintree, Saugus, Revere, Norwood, Nahant, Woburn, Brookline, Hamilton, Topsfield, Arlington, Mansfield, Watertown, Rockland, Chelsea, Gloucester, Medford, Lexington, Bedford, Beverly, Brockton, Lynn and Lynnfield.

Woman Backer Blasts Willkie

CHICAGO, Jan. 17 (INS)—Mrs. Janet Ayer Fairbank, one of Wendell Willkie's most active supporters in the 1940 presidential campaign, today accused Willkie in a letter of having yielded to "regional hysteria" in his endorsement of President Roosevelt's aid-Britain bill.

Mrs. Fairbanks, who was executive director of the no third term Democrats of Illinois during the campaign, wrote Willkie that he had deserted the "no dictatorship" battle which he undertook as the Republican presidential candidate.

NEW HARVARD AWARDS

At least 21 scholarships with maximum stipends of $1000 each will be offered this year to students from schools in 17 states in the Middle West, South and Far West, President James B. Conant of Harvard announced today.

Boston Honors Ben Franklin

Because of the inclement weather, Mayor Tobin streamlined the exercises marking the 235th anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birth in front of City Hall today. There were no speeches, as has been the custom.

Instead, four wreaths were placed at the base of the statue. Mayor Tobin put one there for the city. The second was brought forward by 11 boys from the Burroughs Newsboys' Foundation; the third by John F. Holmes, president of the Boston Club of Printing House Craftsmen, and the fourth by John A. Smith, vice-president of the Advertising Club of Boston.

HUNT IN CALIFORNIA FOR MISSING BOMBER

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Jan. 17 (AP)—Search for a missing twin-motored Army bomber with seven men aboard turned to the California-Oregon border area today on the strength of a report that a plane was seen flying low, in apparent trouble.

Constable Tillman King, of Hornbrok, Cal., in Siskiyou County, reported seeing an Army Plane flying east over the Klamath river yesterday at only 500 feet.

The Army air depot radioed instructions to a searching plane to proceed to that area and Constable King was requested to organize a land search.

The B-18A Douglas disappeared yesterday while on a training flight from its McChord Field base in Washington to the Muroc bombing range in Southern California's Mojave desert.

Today a logging company superintendent at Longview, Washington, about 80 miles south of McChord Field, reported a large plane with motors cut out was seen heading east in the Silver Lake region at 11 a. m. yesterday. A party of men started out over logging routes to search the area.

Governor's Mother Sued in Car Crash

Gov. Saltonstall's mother, Mrs. Eleanor Saltonstall of Chestnut Hill rd., Newton, was made defendant today in two suits, one for $18,000 and one for $10,000, filed in Newton district court.

In the suit for $18,000, William Pope Wright alleges that on Dec. 16 the defendant's servants "by careless negligence, or unskilled manner of operation of an automobile" on the Worcester highway beyond Framingham, caused personal injuries while he, Wright, was operating a horse van.

The second count alleges injury to valuable saddle and show horses in the van, and the third injuries to Wright while a pedestrian.

Hugh Johnston, the other plaintiff, alleges he was a passenger in the van and suffered "severe and permanent injuries." He also alleges valuable property on his person was injured.

Both plaintiffs requested trial by jury.

Malden Slugger Suspect Held

While Angelo DiChiarra, 25, of Cleveland st., Malden, was under 24-hour police protection in Maplewood Hospital, as precaution against his being taken on another "ride," Alphonse Lavargna, 31, of Fenwich st., Malden, arrested in connection with the slugging, pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault with attempt to murder when arraigned before Judge Elbridge G. Davis in Malden district court today.

Lavargna supplied $5000 bail for a hearing one week from today.

At the hospital DiChiarra's name is still on the danger list, although reported recovering from a kicking and beating with a hammer wielded by one of four men.

Lindbergh Go-Between Must Go to Jail

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (AP)—Salvatore Spitale, who once acted as a "go-between" with the underworld in a fruitless attempt to obtain return of kidnaped Baby Lindbergh, today lost his attempt to upset a conviction on a charge of stealing $1000 from a friend.

The appellate division of State Supreme Court unanimously upheld the conviction for first degree grand larceny and subsequent sentence of 5 to 10 years in prison.

Ford Turns Down NLRB Plant Election

DETROIT, Jan. 17 (AP)—I. A. Capizzi, attorney for the Ford Motor Co., informed Frank H. Bowen, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, today that the company would not enter a stipulation consenting to a collective bargaining election among the 3800 employes of Ford's Lincoln plant.

Bowen notified the company 10 days ago that the United Automobile Workers of America (CIO) has petitioned for an election and has claimed to represent a majority of Lincoln employes. He asked both company and union to consent to an election without a formal hearing. The union gave its consent several days later, Capizzi replied today by letter.

LITTLE MISS CINDERELLA—After visiting several Hollywood orphanages in a search for an "unspoiled" girl to play in Columbia's "Penny Serenade," Director George Stevens found Arlene Jackson, 6, who is shown getting acquainted with her co-star, Irene Dunne. Arlene now has a stand-in, a hairdresser, wardrobe mistress, teacher, a private dressing room . . . and $25 a day pay.

Bernard Shaw's Famed Love Notes to Make Book

LONDON, Jan. 17 (INS)—The famous "lovey dovey" letters of George Bernard Shaw to the late Mrs. Patrick Campbell, internationally-famous stage beauty of four decades ago, will soon be published, executors of the British actress' estate announced today.

Shaw's letters, written in the late Victorian and Edwardian eras when it was fashionable to be publicly in love in the grand manner, will be produced in book form. Mrs. Campbell's will stipulates that they not be cut or altered in any way.

Informed of the decision to publish his letters, Shaw commented:

"Forty-five years ago everybody wrote love letters to Mrs. Campbell. I know she thought mine the best of the bunch, though personally I thought those of Burne-Jones (the famous portrait painter) were more interesting.

"All of them were from married men and quite innocent. Before the copyright expires they will, I hope, provide for the education of Mrs. Campbell's great-grandchildren, but others must wait till the old gentlemen who wrote them can no longer make them ridiculous by their white hairs."

Mrs. Campbell died in 1940 at Pau, France, at the age of 77. She left the letters to her grandson, Patrick M. Beach, requesting that they be published "so all who would read them would realize the friendship way of 'l'amite amoureuse" (loving friendship).

From time to time, Mrs. Campbell, one of the few persons who dared be impudent to Shaw, published his letters to twit him. The practice became so alarming that Shaw refused her publication rights for any more.

When the actress wrote, pleading with Shaw to lift his publication ban, the playwright was said to have replied:

"No, Stella, I will not play horse to your Lady Godiva."

Damage enough had been done before the Shaw edict went into effect. Probably the best known passage of any of the Shaw letters to Mrs. Campbell was the following:

"There are such wonderful sorts of relations, and close togethernesses, and babes-in-the-woodinesses, besides being in love; which, as you point out, my diet and feeble nature forbid.

"I may have moments of being in love, but you must overlook them. And now, having expressed myself with carefully punctuated moderation, I shall go to bed quite calmly, and sign myself, oh loveliest, dovelies, babiest, Your Gabiest,

"G. B. S."

CONFESSES KIDNAPING BRIDE

ham, where he told her he intended attacking her. She resisted, he said, and butted him with her head, but he tied her with clothesline he had taken from a piazza behind her apartment block in Everett st.

After they left Stoneham, the suspect said, he had her drive to Pearl st. and the Northern Artery in Somerville, where he stepped out.

LINKED IN OTHER CRIMES

Police said they believed the holdup he attempted and which failed in Boston was an incident also on the night of last Nov. 14, when Miss Barbara Sheehan of Oliver rd., Waban, stepped out of her car at Commonwealth ave. and Fairfield st., Back Bay, when an armed youth stepped in.

She will be asked to view the suspect, as will several other woman victims of holdups and attacks, among them Miss Grace Sullivan, 33, of Otis st., Cambridge.

On the night of Oct. 13 she was kidnaped in the same way as Jeanne Earle by a youth, but after binding her hands with rope he took $10 from her handbag and fled.

The capture of the suspect came not long after Mrs. Diederich had arrived at the rear of her home last night and the armed youth approached her as she was putting her car up.

MRS. JEANNE EARLE, 21

Her Assailant Confesses

He pointed a loaded gun at her heart and demanded her money, but Mrs. Diederich refused to move, then started screaming as he approached her. At her outcry, the man fled.

She then ran to her telephone and notified Lieut Patrick Ready of the Cambridge police. Mrs. Diederich, daughter of Dr. Eugene Wylie of Dorchester and herself a graduate student at Harvard, gave the lieutenant a detailed description of her assailant.

Her words were repeated almost identically by the lieutenant in his orders to radio cars to search the Holden Green area, off Kirkland st, near the Somerville line.

Within five minutes a squad of officers had the Somerville youth in custody. Brought to the Diederich home, he was identified by Mrs. Diederich, according to the police.

The young woman, mother of two small children, is the wife of Paul B. Diederich of the Harvard faculty, engaged in research work with the Harvard committee on communication.

'Bad Man' Tamed by Lady's Ire

There is one six-foot "bad man" at large somewhere in the city today who has learned better than to pick on a full-grown woman.

He learned his lesson from frail, 28-year-old Miss Helen M. Page of Beacon st., Back Bay, and this is how:

Miss Page—alone—halted her car at a red light signal at Dartmouth st. and Commonwealth ave., and the youth, possibly the same "stop light bandit" who has terrorized several women drivers in the Back Bay recently, opened the car door quickly and pushed in beside her.

Told to "move on," Miss Page calmly eyed the stranger and retorted:

"You better get out of this car and get out in a hurry."

As he stared in astonishment, the young woman followed up with:

"I said to get out. I won't move until you do. And if you don't hurry up I'm going to call a policeman."

The "bad man" took to his heels

Plane Plant Strike Tuesday

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 17 (AP)—A strike of CIO United Automobile Workers at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. was set for next Tuesday, after a peace meeting called by a federal conciliator failed to effect settlement of a wage dispute.

The "deadline" was announced by Richard Frankensteen, chief CIO negotiator, who said the date originally had been fixed for tonight but had been deferred to permit "activity" from Washington, and because of the inaugural of President Roosevelt.

Harry C. Malcom, conciliator, said the company submitted a new counter proposal but that the offer was not acceptable to the union. The proposal, however, will form the basis of a union reply today.

Malcom said he would hold separate meetings with the negotiators and call a joint session if there was any indication some common ground had been reached for further discussion.

Rites Tomorrow For Miss Mullen

Leary Critically Ill, Wife's Rites Tomorrow

While City Messenger Edward J. Leary lies critically ill with pneumonia at his home, 90 The Fenway, funeral arrangements were being made today for his wife, Mrs. Theresa G. Leary, who died last night from the same illness.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Leary was a Boston school teacher. Services will be tomorrow at 9 a. m. in St. Cecelia's Church, Back Bay.

Garner Offered Role In Movies

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17 (INS)—Retiring Vice-President John N. Garner has been offered a movie job, it was disclosed today.

The bid to appear in a film in which the character of the Vice-President will be an important role was sent to Garner by Charles R. Rogers, Hollywood producer.

Should Garner accept, Rogers said, he will be required only to portray himself as presiding officer over the Senate in the Senate chamber sequences.

HUB HEARS AUSTRALIA MINISTER

Australia's minister to Washington, Richard G. Casey, likened the British Empire and the United States today to "two blades of a pair of scissors" which "must work together to do the job."

In an address at a Boston Chamber of Commerce luncheon, Casey declared the continued existence of the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States was essential to each other.

Consequently, Casey said there was "a reasonable, even a compelling, case cooperation, each in his own sphere."

He continued:

"Post-war cooperation may, and probably will, be just as essential on problems such as markets, finance, exchanges, tariffs, raw materials, the future of gold, the revival of multilateral trade, the absorption of export surpluses, and the switching of millions of the civil populations from war industries to peace industries.

"Today's problems are starker and more immediately concerned with physical survival and the defeat of a country and of a point of view that I think you will not misunderstand if I describe as the common enemy of mankind.

"When we have won this war, the world will need to be conducted on the basis of a pan-Americana-Britannica, if I might coin a clumsy, but perhaps potentially useful, phrase.

"The dominion of Australia entered the war with the British to help defend the freedom and independencee of decent peoples and from that moment the Australian people have not faltered in their determination to see this thing through."

Youth Leaps to Safety As Car Drops Into Bay

His car out of control, a South End youth saved his life by leaping just as his machine smashed through the gates of the open L st. drawbridge and plunged into South Boston bay today.

The driver, Thomas J. Fay, 23, of Albany st., South End, managed to cling to the slushy street at the side of the bridge while his auto sank from sight in 30 feet of water.

Thomas Fay

A few minutes earlier the drawbridge had swung open for an oil barge entering the Reserved Canal.

Fay, driving from South Boston toward Summer st., said he approached the bridge slowly, but had not realized the slippery condition of the highway, coated with ice and slush. His machine swerved when he applied the brake, then coasted ahead with unslackened speed.

When it rammed the gates, Fay leaped. Several residents nearby and employes of the Boston Edison Co. plant heard the crash and called police. Radio Dispatcher Michael F. Powers ordered two squad cars, wreckers, ambulances and the police boat McShane to the scene.

TRUCK HITS GATE

While the bridge was still open, a heavy truck appeared coming from the opposite direction and this machine likewise skidded into the guard gate. One wheel of the truck was hanging over the bridge when the vehicle stopped.

Stormy conditions prevented salvage operations to recover Fay's submerged sedan until later today or tomorrow.

Why Not Pull Hole In After It?

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 17 (AP)—It will take two days to dig out a digging machine that dug a hole and fell in it.

Rains softened the earth on the sides of the hole and let the dragline excavator plop down nine feet.

Six Hunted in $7000 Swindle of Sisters

NEW BEDFORD, Jan. 17—Two wealthy New Bedford spinster sisters, quiet-spoken members of the Quaker faith, dreamed of bringing peace to a war-torn world . . .

Today, an eight-state police search was launched for embezzled six more members of an eight-man ring that had traded on their gentle dreams to mulct them of more than $7000 last month.

Already in custody were two men charged by state police with larceny in the case.

The women are the Misses Mary andHelen Seabury, wealthy, and known throughout the nation for their interest in thec ause of peace.

POLICE TAKE HAND

For years they have offered prizes in contests for school children, in which essays were written on peace.

A few weeks ago, police explained, they became interested in a "Peace Coalition" movement by which the present world war was to be prevented from spreading further, and the warring nations shown—by gentle means—the errors of their violent ways.

The eight men wanted by police are said to have approached the sisters to further this dream by setting up an organization to make it effective.

Instead, officers, allege, they simply took the sisters' money.

A business associate of the women became suspicious when he noticed the cancelled checks returned to them, and made a complaint to the office of Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Edward J. Harrington is in charge of the case.

BROOKLINE MAN HELD

Franklin B. Bowers of Brookline and Wellfleet was arrested by State Police Lieut. Francis C. Clemmey, and charged with the larceny of $2000 from the sisters.

He pleaded innocent in district court, and was held in $3000 bail for hearing Feb. 12. James J. Mullaney, 47, of Lowell and New Bedford, was arrested on a similar charge.

Mullaney wos arrested as he left Boston City Hospital after having had 15 stitches taken in a head wound, and pleaded that he was not well enough to go into court to answer the charges.

His $3000 bond was technically defaulted until he does appear. Police said he had represented himself to the Seabury sisters as agent for a peace cause, had taken their money and deposited it in his own account.

The two sisters, members of one of New Bedford's first families, made no comment on the bitter end to their plans.

Auto Show Out To Aid Defense

DETROIT, Jan. 17 (INS)—Because of the press of work in carrying out national defense orders, it has been decided to cancel the annual automobile show in New York City, Alvin MacAuley, president of the Automobile Manufacturers' Assn. announced.

MacAuley, who said the decision was arrived at after a canvas of automobile and truck manufacturers, added that he believed "some model changes may be expected where they will not interfere with the defense program."

MacAuley also disclosed that last Oct. 15 each automobile company gave assurances that future model changes would be subordinated to defense production.

The association president said the action in calling off the show would not control the course each company may follow in introducing their 1942 models.

Leahy Now Recovering From Illness at Vichy

DR. MURPHY'S RITES HELD TOMORROW

Funeral services for Dr. Edward F. Murphy, 63, chief medical examiner for the City of Boston law department and a pioneer in introducing hockey in Boston, will be held from his home in Perkins st., Jamaica Plain, tomorrow at 9 a. m.

Dr. Murphy, a native of St. Johns, N. B., died of pneumonia at Forest Hills Hospital, of which he was president.

He played hockey in Canada and on moving to Boston in 1901 aided in developing hockey locally. He was official timekeeper for the Boston Bruins professional team and has officiated at out-of-town championship matches.

A solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated at 10 a. m. at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Jamaica Plain. He leaves his widow, the former Isabel Gillies; a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Shirley; three brothers and two sisters.

DISTRESS CALLS FROM 2 BRITISH SHIPS TELL OF NAZI TORPEDOINGS

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (AP)—Two large British vessels—the 14,935-ton passenger liner Almeda Star and the 10,578-ton freighter Zealandic—were torpedoed overnight in the same general area northwest of Londonderry, Ireland, causing New York maritime circles to theorize today that the Nazis had thrown into the sea warfare submarines large enough to stand the punishment of winter storms.

The "SSSS" signals from the two ships, the first heard in several days, crackled through the air waves less than eight hours apart. They gave no indication whether the ships were sinking, or whether they could make a port.

The Zealandic, a 482-foot ship out of Southampton, was first to signal distress. Shortly after 5 p. m. (E. S. T.) yesterday, she reported being torpedoed approximately 650 miles northwest of Londonderry and gave her position as "latitude 58.28 north, longtiude 20.43 west."

That was the only word from the Zealandic, which customarily trades between England and New Zealand.

Then, at 12:49 a. m. today, the Almeda Star radioed that she had been hit approximately 350 miles northwest of Londonderry. She gave her position as "lattitude 59.16 north, longitude 13.40 west."

The Almeda Star, which is 578 feet long and had twin screws, figured in the news Sept. 30, 1939, when she arrived armed at Rio de Janeiro. On Nov. 14, 1939, Nazis classified her as a "pirate ship" and declared she would be sunk without warning because she carried arms.

This is another in a series of letters from persons in wartorn England to friends and relatives in Greater Boston.

From: James Boothroyd,
271 Cross Lane,
Primrose Hill,
Huddersfield,
Yorkshire, England.

To: George Boothroyd,
242 Methuen St.,
Lawrence, Mass.

Dear Brother:

I received your letter this week and was glad to hear from you. You will have had your presidential election by the time you receive this letter, but I do not think it will make any difference to us which candidate is elected as it looks to me that all America is thinking about is to keep out of the war; but to supply us with the goods so long as we can pay for them.

Of course, America has done well to help us in that way as we need all the help we can get, for we have a stiff job on, and we shall have to win this war or else it will be a dark outlook for us in England.

I dare say you will have read all about the air raids on this country and the gallant exploits of our Royal Air Force.

We have beaten the Germans in the air and the threatened invasion has not come off so far. The fighting looks like it is taking place around the east and the Mediterranean, and it looks like being a long war.

KEEP WELL, BROTHER

You must remember you are 75 years old and old age is upon you; but I hope you will keep well for many years yet. I only wish I could come to you out of this terrible war, but it is our duty to stick it to the end no matter what may befall to us.

Dear brother, I am not in khaki as I am too old, but we are all in the front line on account of the air raids.

I do hope we shall win. This war is different from the last one as it is being brought to our own door step.

I have not done any grinding and setting of the cutters attached to cutting machines. I know the theory but I have not practised it.

As you say, you are busy making cloth for the soldiers same as we are, but we have not much work in the ordinary civilian trade as we can only trade with the States and the Empire. We should be very slack if it was not for Government work.

NOT SAFE TO GO OUT

I cannot tell you much about our brothers and others as I see very little of them, as it is not safe to go out at night in the blackout. There are no lights to show you your way about, so you must excuse me if I do not send you Reynold's regularly as sometimes it does not come. It is printed in London and London is catching it hot these days.

We are all fairly well at home here and remember me to Laura and let her read this letter. Tell her to send us a line and the name she has christened baby. Best love to all of you from your dear brother,

JAMES H. BOOTHROYD

ONE-FIFTH STUDENTS ABSENT

More than one-fifth of the entire public school enrollment is represented on the absentee list as a result of the grippe, Supt. Arthur L. Gould reported today.

Health authorities, however, insisted that grippe and the wave of colds definitely is on the wane in Boston and the State.

In elementary, vocational and trade schools, 20,309 children are absent, according to Supt. Gould, while 5024 high school students and 249 teachers are likewise affected.

Absentee figures showed a peak on Tuesday when 25,513 students were absent. Supt. Gould stated that many of those absentees were caused by the near zero temperatures which kept many home as a precautionary measure. On Wednesday, 27,462 were absent from Boston schools, and yesterday's figures showed a further decline.

The figures, Supt. Gould said, did not include absentees from parochial and private schools, but did include many children sent home at once after sneezing, sniffling or showing other indications of catching cold.

Spread of the grippe north and east of Boston continued yesterday with schools in Concord and Laconia, N. H., being ordered closed. At Concord, health officials stated 1133 pupils were absent with the disease.

NAVY YARD PUTS PHOTOS ON PASSES AS SAFEGUARD

In a new move designed to prevent possible sabotage and other subversive activity, officials at Charlestown Navy Yard today were issuing passes bearing photographs of the owners.

Not only do inspecting guards compare the photographs with the holder of the pass, but also check up on the bearer's weight, indicated by scales which form a background to the photo.

Heretofore, employes were admitted through the well-guarded portals simply by showing an ordinary pass and an identification button.

Under the tightening of restrictions, all persons inside the yard must keep their buttons prominently displayed or face grilling at the hands of hard-boiled Marines.

TINKHAM QUESTIONS STIMSON ON NAVY CLAUSE

Section 8 of the "arsenal" bill, which reads:

"The secretaries of War and the Navy are hereby authorized to purchase or otherwise acquire arms, ammunition and implements of war produced within the jurisdiction of any country to which Section 3 is applicable, whenever the President deems such purchase or acquisition to be necessary in the interests of the defense of the United States."

Countries as referred to in Section 3 are "those countries the defense of which is deemed vital to the defense of the United States."

—Editor's note.

GAG RULE CHARGED

Committee members frequently clashed and Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers (R.), of Massachusetts, charged that "gag rule" was imposed.

"I object to that," Chairman Bloom (D.), of New York, shouted. "There is no 'gag rule.'"

Previously, Tinkham, angered because Bloom ruled out many pointed questions, refused to proceed further. Bloom again flared up. He declared Tinkham had already occupied the floor for fifty minutes.

"That isn't 'gag rule'," he said.

Rep. Eaton (R.) of New Jersey appealed to committee members "to cease this warfare in the committee and discuss the bill while we confront the greatest crisis in our history."

Stimson said he did not help draft the bill, and that he saw it only a few days before it was introduced. He added that he did not study the measure in detail when he first saw it, and that he could not tell whether any changes were written into it after it was first shown to him.

BROAD POWERS

Tinkham then questioned Stimson at length regarding the broad powers of the bill. Tinkham asked whether the bill will permit the President to throw all the nation's resources "short of manpower," behind any country in the world the President desires to select?"

"I never heard him (the President) state any policy as broad as that," Stimson replied.

Tinkham insisted that the President's address to Congress on the state of the union outlined such a policy.

"I think the powers granted in this bill are about as clearly defined as could be and still give the authority to meet the threat of war," Stimson replied.

Tankham asked if, under the bill, Mr. Roosevelt could not decide that aid to Russia is necessary for our defenses.

"Yes, possibly he could," replied Stimson.

TRUST IN ROOSEVELT

Stimson, a Republican who has served in two cabinets previously (Taft-Hoover), voiced his trust in Mr Roosevelt.

"It is my observation, and one of long standing and from observation of various men who have held the Presidency, whom I have had the honor of observing at close range, that I have been impressed with the tremendous sobering influence the responsibilities of the Presidency impose on any man, particularly in foreign relations," said Stimson.

"There has been no President who has rushed the country into war. Many Presidents have held back when the Congress and country pushed toward war."

He added that he had observed President Roosevelt for six months and that his opinion regarding other Presidents applies to Mr. Roosevelt.

"You can trust him," he said.

Stimson remarked that he belonged to Tinkham's party (Republican).

"You used to," retorted Tinkham as the audience tittered.

"I think perhaps I still do," replied Stimson smiling.

When Tinkham, who stood and waved his spectacles as he poured his questions on Stimson, asked him if he would have declared war when the Japanese sank the American gunboat, Panay, in China, Chairman Bloom refused to let Stimson answer.

JUDGMENT WAS ACCURATE

Tinkham, temporarily stymied Stimson when he asked the Secretary whether he believed in "a preventive war." Stimson said that he did not understand the word preventive. Tinkham explained that it means some countries, in fear of attack, make war on a nation to "prevent" an attack.

"I haven't heard that discussed," Stimson replied.

Tinkham asked Stimson if months ago he did not urge opening American ports to British warships.

"I did. I am sorry to say that my judgment then as to the perils and dangers that might come to this country were accurate," said Stimson, rising to his feet.

Tinkham had another brush with Bloom when he started to refer to his experiences in two wars.

"You have occupie. the floor for 30 minutes now," Bloom said, "and your personal experience in many wars will take a lot of time and we will have to rule them out of order."

SHACKLE NATION

Tinkham then pursued a previous question as to whether full material aid to England or China would lead to an expeditionary force.

Stimson replied that he thought the material aid policy "the best we can make to keep from sending our man power" to foreign countries.

Tinkham then asked Stimson whether he would object to an amendment to the bill to prevent convoys.

"I think that the bill should stand as it is," Stimson replied.

"In other words you would object," Tinkham said.

"I prefer the bill as it is," Stimson replied.

Stimson added that "all such" proposals, if carried out, "might shackle this nation in some unforeseen emergency."

NOT AWARE OF VIOLATION

Mrs. Rogers, recalling Stimson's citation of precedents that aid to Britain is not a violation of international law, asked if England and France had not declared war and thus violated the Kellogg pact outlawing war.

Stimson agreed as to the declaration of war but insisted that they did so to resist aggression against Poland.

"Then Great Britain violated the Kellogg peace pact," said Mrs. Rogers.

"I'm not aware of it," replied Stimson.

Mrs. Rogers asserted that Britain violated the pact during the Italian invasion in Ethiopia, but Stimson said he did not recall all the circumstances.

Mrs. Rogers and Stimson came to stalemate over the former's question whether Hitler would "try to assimilate us?"

She pointed out that Hitler is evacuating subjects of German descent from conquered territory in France too because he could not put them under the German philisiphy of life. Referring to his testimony of yesterday, Stimson said that "I never intended to say that Hitler is going to try and assimilate us, I said he is going to try and at ack us."

COMMITTEE IN ROW

Asked why he believed that Hitler was going to attack us, he said he'd rather let Hitler answer.

The committee engaged in another row over Mrs. Rogers' type of questioning.

Stimson suggested to Mrs. Rogers that he is a very busy man and that the longer he remained on the witness stand the more likely there would be delays

"I'm a very busy man," he reiterated.

The bickering, however, continued with Tinkham shouting, "this is a stacked committee."

"If this bill is passed do you think that it means that our country is going to get into war?" Mrs. Rogers asked.

"I do not," Stimson replied.

"Do you think that if we give unlimited credits to Great Britain we will be asked sooner or later to send an army to England or Europe?"

"I have no knowledge to answer that."

"Would you care to give an opinion?"

"I would not."

"Does it not seem to you that Great Britain will ask for our men eventually?"

"I don't think so."

"Do you not think if we pass this bill the U. S. will have no alternative but to send our men after our money?"

"I don't think so."

Britain in Plea For Destroyers

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP)—Minister of shipping Ronald H. Cros reemphasized today Britain's need for more destroyers to combat German U-boats and reduce "the unquestionably serious" losses of British shipping.

Despite a "welcome diminution" of losses in recent weeks, he said he was not willing to assume "that the future will be so agreeable."

"We know how to cope with the submarine today. Given the equipment, destroyers and aircraft, I am sure we can subdue this menace," he said.

(Britain already has acquired 50 destroyers from the United States.)

Republic Steel Plant Faces Strike Threat

CLEVELAND, Jan. 17 (AP)—Job and wage grievances between Republic Steel Corp. and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee (CIO) have developed a strike threat at the Corrigan-McKinney plant, William Donovan, district SWOC director, reported today.

The plant is producing sheet steel for armament industries. Donovan disclosed that a 2½ hour "wildcat" strike staged by 12 cranemen at the plant Tuesday halted work on which 800 workers were engaged. He said the trouble was provoked by a 15 to 20-cent hourly wage reduction ordered for the cranemen.

Paris-Berlin Express Reported Derailed

VICHY, France, Jan. 17 (AP)—French newspapers published a report from Paris today that the Paris-Berlin express train was derailed several minutes after it left the north station in Paris yesterday.

Three persons were injured slightly. It was the second recent derailment of an international express in occupied France.

MAN WHO ATTACKED MAINE SCHOOL TEACHER SOUGHT

LISBON FALLS, Me., Jan. 17—Widely sought by officers today was a powerful man of about 50 who bound and gagged Miss Mary McCarthy, 22, in the small one-room schoolhouse.

Sheriff Rex. V. Bridge said the young teacher escaped harm at the hands of the large gray-haired man.

"I fainted, I guess, after he dragged me across the floor," the sheriff quoted Miss McCarthy as saying.

Raid Fires Bristol; Nazi Base Bombed

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP)—The important shipping center of Bristol on Britain's west coast bore the brunt of German air attacks on England during the night, the British said today.

Approximately 100 fires were started by incendiary and high explosive bombs.

A fire officer said, however, "there were 60 fires put out in less than 10 minutes," and damage was reported negligible. The raiders spent several hours over the area.

The raiders also struck at London, at towns in the southeast, south and southwest, the government reported.

Royal Air Force bombers, at the same time, smashed at the German naval base at Wilhelmshaven for the second successive night, authoritative sources said, with a "highly concentrated" and "highly successful" attack. Of the German raids a British communique said:

"A number of fires, some of them serious, were started in a town in the west country. These were effectively brought under control by the fire services but some damage was done to commercial and other buildings."

The government said the number of casualties was not large in this town nor in other places raided.

Thousands of incendiaries, in addition to explosives, were reported dropped on an unidentified south coast town. More than 60 fires were started in the raid, the town's longest of the war, but it was said damage was slight because virtually every building had a fire-watcher.

In one western city a number of persons were killed when the police and fire stations were hit.

London had two alerts. The result of quick thrusts by German bombers, both of which drew intense anti-aircraft fire at the capital's outskirts. Some bombs fell, but no serious damage was reported.

Two hundred soldiers and rescue workers who dug throughout the night with the aid of screened lights removed more bodies from the wreckage of a London men's hotel bombed Wednesday night. The search was continuing today.

Stirling Wants Fleet in Atlantic

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Jan. 17 (AP)—The United States fleet, says Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr., U. S. Navy, retired, should be concentrated in the Atlantic immediately and used to convoy war material to Great Britain.

"The defeat of Hitler must be our first objective," Admiral Stirling asserted last night in a speech on the University of Illinois campus.

"If we become too involved now in the Pacific, we shall be playing into the hands of Hitler with Japan. Anything Japan takes now can be retaken if England wins."

Declaring "we're at war now," the admiral advocated use of the Pacific fleet in the Atlantic except for a detachment that would serve to maintain "defensive attitude toward Japan.

RAF in Daylight Raid on France

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP)—A daylight assault by Royal Air Force bombers on German-held ports along the French coast was believed in progress this afternoon.

A formation of British bombers was seen flying across the misty Strait of Dover. Shortly thereafter heavy explosions were heard on the Kentish coast, the sound apparently coming from across the strait.

SOVIET-GERMAN FRICTION SEEN GROWING IN BALKANS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Jan. 17 (AP)—Signs of increasing friction between Soviet Russia and Rumania and diplomatic reports that Adolf Hitler intends to take over Rumania and make it a German protectorate kept the Balkans in a state of anxiety today.

All traffic on Hungarian rail roads, except international trains was suspended last night, adding to the general apprehension. The action was believed by observers to mean that the German military command had found it necessary to take drastic steps to complete the projected movement of 300,000 troops with full motorized equipment before the end of January.

REPEATED CLASHES

A high diplomatic source said repeated clashes had occurred on the Russian-Rumanian border and that an average of five to 10 Rumanian guards are being slain nightly in incidents along the Bessarabian-Bucovina frontier.

One theory expressed by observers is that these clashes—which have been denied officially—are being used by the Russians to test how far the Nazis might fall back in Rumania should the Soviet demand the provinces of Moldavia and northern Dobruja from Rumania.

DEAL POSSIBLE

(Russia took Bessarabia and northern Bucovina from Rumania by an ultimatum last June. Moldavia and northern Dobruja border on those ceded territories to the south, deeper within Rumania. Southern Dobruja was ceded to Bulgaria last June under an Axis-dictated settlement.)

Reports persisted that a deal was possible whereby Soviet Russia would be given a free hand in these provinces in return for a free German hand in Bulgaria.

Diplomatic quarters said it was generally believed that if Hitler should formally take over Rumania, which already is a Nazi troop center, the new German minister to Bucharest, Baron Manfred Von Killinger, would be gauleiter (Nazi district leader) in the protectorate.

Reasons cited in German quarters for establishment of a Rumanian protectorate included the difficulties encountered in smothering potential conflicts between the Army and the Iron Guard in moving military items, billeting troops, speeding production and controlling the populace.

JAPS PLAN REPLY TO SEC. HULL

TOKYO, Jan 17 (AP)—With the Japanese press already assailing Secretary Hull's testimony on United States defense needs as "a clear challenge to the Axis, short of an ultimatum," it was reported today that Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka was preparing to reply with a speech in Parliament Tuesday.

Moreover, Domei, Japanese news agency, announced, Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye soon will clarify for the public his cabinet's policies.

Testifying Wednesday before the House foreign affairs committee, Sec. Hull asserted that danger to the United States would be "multiplied manyfold" if Japan, Germany and Italy, signatories of an all-for-one and one-for-all military alliance, gained control of the high seas.

Expressions in many Japanese quarters indicated that Hull's remarks had produced deepr anxiety here than any development since Washington last October advised United States citizens to withdraw from the Orient.

It was indicated that high officials had debated most of today the advisability of making an immediate reply to Hull and then decided against it.

High military and cabinet officials met today with Premier Konoye for the third time this week.

Foreign observers expressed belief the almost unprecedented series of conferences were indicative of closer co-operation between the cabinet and army and navy chieftains.

70,000 Italians, Greek War Toll

ATHENS, Jan 17. (INS)—More than 70,000 Italian soldiers have been killed, wounded, or taken prisoner since the beginning of the Italo-Greek war, Greek military authorities announced todsy.

Fascist losses, it was stated, represent approximately one-third of the Italian army at the time of the start of hostilities.

Dispatches today reported Italian and Greek troops were waging a bloody hand-to-hand battle in the snow-choked mountain passes 12 miles north of Klisura.

On all fronts, Greek progress was slowed down as the snow which has been falling for the last few days turned into heavy rain, softening the snow and filling the Albanian mountain passes with slush.

Artillery duels, especially on the northern front at Pogradetz and on the central front along the Telepeni-Klisura sector, continued on a deadly scale.

RAF Blasts Sicily Again

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 17 (AP)—The British Royal Air Force announced today another air raid on the airdrome at Catania, Sicily, reported to be the base of the German dive-bombers in the Axis offensive against the British Mediterranean fleet.

Buildings and several aircraft were fired, the RAF communique said. The raid was staged Wednesday night.

"A heavy explosion and a large fire were caused at the northwest hangar by the first aircraft over the target," the RAF reported.

"This fire burnt fiercely throughout the attack and was visible 50 miles away. It assisted following aircraft to identify the target."

Chinese Army to Quell Mutiny, Japs Say

Rain Fails to Daunt Inaugural Crowds

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP)—The vanguard of a traditionally-gay inaugural crowd began to throng the Capital's broad avenues and marble halls today for a week-end of sightseeing before witnessing President Roosevelt's third induction into office.

Although cold rain and sleet Wednesday night and Thursday left festoons of red, white and blue bunting in downtown stores limp and bedraggled, enthusiastic visitors joined Washingtonians in hoping for clear skies during Monday's ceremonies. The threat of more rain today failed to daunt them.

"There can't be another inauguration day as wet as the one four years ago," contended those who were soaked to the skin by a pelting rain throughout the first Jan. 20 inauguration.

But the weatherman, in advance of his official forecast, wouldn't give any odds against such a repitition.

COME PREPARED

"I'd advise out-of-towners to come prepared for any sort of weather, particularly cold and sloppy weather," he said. "There's no reason at this stage to expect bad weather any more than good weather, but it's better to be ready for anything."

It was taken for granted that Mr. Roosevelt would devote most of his inaugural address to defense and foreign problems, just as eight years ago he said he was speaking "the whole truth, frankly and bo'dly" in the depression crisis.

Because of the international situation, the President asked that the inaugural program be kept simple. Instead of a grand ball, an "inaugural gala"—an entertainment by noted musicians and actors—will take place Sunday night. Charles Chaplin, Ethel Barrymore, Nelson Eddy, and Mickey Rooney volunteered to participate.

DINNER FOR COLLEGE

Preceding the gala will be a dinner for members of the electoral college. At the same time state governors will talk over defense problems while dining with William Knudsen, co-director of the office of production management.

An interdenominational church service will be held Sunday afternoon in the "Court of Freedom," built across the street from the White House. The President himself, following the custom he set at his first two inaugurations, will visit St. John's Episcopal Church for prayer Monday morning.

SLIMMING GIRL DOWN TO 126

I've begun to like the massage. I've learned to relax and like the punishment, and you really feel like a new person after it.

What is even more strange and wonderful, I felt so alive when I left the gym yesterday that I walked back to the office from above Copley Square away down to Devonshire st. I haven't walked that far in years.

All the way down Boylston and over Tremont sts., I leered at winter coats in the windows, happily dwelling on how they would look on my new figger.

I have a few new ones which you might like to try on your bedroom floor; incidentally, girls who do exercises at home tell me that one of those big beach towels, of heavy grade, is swell for floor gymnastics.

One of the new exercises is very simple, but good. You stretch both arms as high as you can and bend first left, then right, 10 times. Bend from the waist, stretching hard. You are supposed to do this several times a day.

Another one, on the table, is the knee squeeze. Lying flat on your back, you bring one knee up, at the same time raising your shoulders off the table, and try to touch your chin to the knee.

EXTRA COUNTS

You do this first left, then right, then both knees together. Try that on your floor. Five counts each way is enough for me.

I notice that Mrs. Alexander is sneaking up on me with extra counts. The easier exercises I am doing 10 times instead of eight, the harder ones eight instead of five.

Well, the three pounds off made it seem worth while. Tonight I'll treat myself to a really super special steak. I like masculine meals. Why did I have to be a female, anyhow, and go through these shenanigans just because Hollywood made us curve-conscious?

(Mary, Mary, you're surprising us . . . you seem to genuinely LIKE this reducing business! Well, maybe tomorrow we'll place a bet on you.)

WHAT STIMSON HINT OF NAVY TRANSFER MAY MEAN

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Berlin and Washington yesterday produced striking authoritative statements which, while purely coincidental, would seem to be so closely associated in idea as to demand consideration in relation to each other.

One was contained in an article in Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, and therefore stamped with official approval. The other developed in Secretary of War Stimson's testimony before the House foreign affairs committee.

First Item—Hitler's paper said the Fuehrer's statement that Germany has plenty of submarines will gain import during the next six months, because American aid for Britain ultimately will be a problem, not only of production, but of supply.

Second Item—Secretary Stimson objected to writing into the lease-lend bill any prohibition against releasing American warships to Britain or any other nation.

"I can forsee conditions," he stated, "under which the Navy could be transferred under conditions very advantageous."

U-BOAT MENACE

Now, Mr. Stimson didn't specify the conditions under which it might be desirable to make a transfer, and far be it from me to try to read his mind. However, it would be very easy to offer an interpretation which would make his statement a corollary to the claim by Hitler's paper.

The Fuehrer's journal in effect threatens that the German submarine offensive will prevent the delivery of American supplies to Britain.

Whether Hitler has "plenty" of U-boats depends on what he means by "plenty." Be that as may, observers generally agree that he has a good many—obviously enough to have created a very dangerous situation for British shipping.

The remark that American aid will be a problem, not only of production, but of supply, is a long-headed observation. There is nothing more certain than that this is true, and it is a vital point which a lot of people have been overlooking.

Obviously it will avail little in the way of help for Britain if we produce mountains of supplies and they can't be delivered because of Hitler's counter-blockade.

Should the British be unable to cope with this menace, there inevitably must arrive a moment of grave crisis for the little island kingdom. This is so because she is largely dependent on sea-borne supplies, both for subsistence and for the wherewithal to make war.

HITLER'S DUAL OFFENSIVE

But that isn't the whole picture. Hitler is waging a dual offensive on this front in an effort to win the battle of Britain and thus clinch the war. The submarine drive is one-half of it. His terrific assault by air is the other. And both of these lead toward the projected invasion of England with troops.

Britain's problem is to counter these offensives in time. She is handicapped in meeting the submarine campaign by several circumstances, but one of the most important is the lack of sufficient destroyers and other light, fast warships to act as convoys and submarine hunters.

Should Hitler be able to unleash a further pack of U-boats, England's need of warships will increase. Certainly if the time arrives when Hitler can make his great gamble at invasion, men-of-war will be a crying need to blast the vast Nazi armada of transports out of the English channel.

I said in this column recently that if the British ever felt driven to call on us for more aid than we already have proffered, it likely would be a plea for warships. That thought grows stronger with each passing day.

That is why one wonders whether Secretary Stimson might have had something of the sort in mind.

NAVY LOAN CLAUSE BACKED BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP)—President Roosevelt at his press conference today said a provision to let the War and Navy secretaries buy war materials from friendly nations was put in the lend-lease bill as a precaution.

In a world of change, he told reporters, every 24 hours something might turn up to make it necessary to add to American defenses. Advising against jumping at conclusions, he said the provision was just a precautionary measure for American defense.

The President said he had been questioned concerning a newspaper story which quoted that the bill was drawn to permit purchase by the United States of the British and French navies.

He said, in reply, he supposed Congress might authorize him to acquire the German Navy, too, and asked whether newsmen did not think the discussion was awfully, awfully cow-jump-over-the-moon business.

At first he misinterpreted the inquiry to understand the press was asking for comment on the possibility of disposing of the United States Navy to Britain.

He remarked somewhat sarcastically that nothing in the bill would prohibit his doing what might be a dangerous thing—standing on his head. But he added with a chuckle that the President of the United States does not expect to stand on his head, has no desire to do so and similarly has no desire to get rid of the Navy.

He was asked whether, since he did not intend to make any transfer of the fleet, he would have any objections to a restriction in the measure on such a transfer.

British Cruiser Hit By Nazis, Rome Says

ROME, Jan. 17 (AP)—The Italian high command reported today that waves of German bombers seriously damaged a British cruiser at Malta besides scoring new hits on the aircraft carrier Illustrious and hitting a merchant vessel.

The high command, in making the cruiser claim, and Siefani, official Italian news agency, in circulating a glowing account of the Germans "brilliant action," outdid the Berlin report of the attack. The Berlin communique cited only the aircraft carrier Illustrious and the merchant ship. It was a repeat bombardment for the carrier.

Stefani said that great quantities of heavy and medium caliber bombs and "tons" of incendiaries were dumped on Valletta, Maltese capital, its arsenal, ships in the harbor and others of "the most important objectives on the island."

"Fires and devastation," Stefani declared, resulted "almost everywhere in the arsenal and harbor of Valletta."

The agency called it "a most violent mass bomb action," and added: "During the German air force's action the enemy's anti-aircraft reaction was most violent. Weather conditions, although bad, failed to hinder the brilliant action of the German air corps."

WHO WILL WIN THE WAR?

IN THE NEXT Sunday Advertiser

Weygand, DeGaulle Union Now Forecast

The startling disclosure that General Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in North Africa, recently addressed an "affectionate" letter to general Charles de Gaulle, leader of the "Free French" forces in exile, is made in the following article written for International News Service by Sir Philip Gibbs. This letter, the noted writer and war correspondent says, is highly significant of things to come.

By SIR PHILIP GIBBS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 17 (INS)—The veil which conceals Germany's next move has been drawn aside slightly by the air battle against ships in the Mediterranean.

Today it is known that the German air force has established bases in Sicily and is moving a considerable number of its most experienced and daring pilots to the Italian coast. That is the best form of aid so far sent to Mussolini in his present plight growing out of British successes in Egypt and Libya and Green victories in Albania.

AIMS TO DESTROY FLEET

But it is strictly in accordance with Germany's strategical idea, dominated by one all-absorbing purpose—which is to smash, weaken, or cripple Britain's sea power, to destroy her merchant fleet, and to prevent the free passage of supplies.

The Germans are shedding no tears over the Italian fleet.

I am quite certain from what I know of them that secretly they are gleeful over the humiliation of their ally, for whom they have nothing but contempt.

But they do not want Italy to make a separate peace, enforced by complete defeat, and will do their best by all military measures to stop that, while finding Italy's coastline valuable for the purpose I have named.

There is also another deeply important motive for a German move in the Mediterranean. From Sicily and other air bases they can keep watchful eyes on, and if needs be concentrate air power over, French North Africa.

HITLER WORRIED

Hitler undoubtedly is worried about developments in Algeria and Morocco. His pressure upon Marshal Petain and the Vichy government is checked by the possibility that French North Africa may break away and join forces with the British now striking westward beyond Tobruk towards Derna.

If that happened, Italy's African empire wouldn't worth a nickel, and Hitler's idea of French collaboration would be gravely weakened.

All these things fit together like a jig-saw puzzle, and can be pictured fairly clearly, although what is happening in French minds over there still remains uncertain.

The other day, Gen. Maxime Weygand, now commander of the French Colonial Armies, wrote a letter to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French movement in England, addressing him affectionately. This may be highly significant of things to come.

But, as I said, the main object of Germany is to weaken British sea power in the Mediterranean as well as in the Atlantic.

CONVOY PASSES

This was shown a few days ago when German dive-bombers attacked a British convoy for seven hours, hitting the aircraft carrier Illustrious and losing many of their own bombers by the navy's intensive anti-aircraft fire. This combat may be only the prelude to more intensive attacks of the same kind.

On balance, the German dive-bombers failed, the British convoy passed with its supplies.

But it would be unwise to minimize the new danger created by German occupation of Sicily at the bottleneck of the straits through which all British shipping must pass down the Mediterranean.

The sea must be kept open at all costs by the British navy for the passage of arms and ammunition to Greece, Egypt and Turkey.

It is most likely that the next phase of the war will be concentrated upon this struggle for the Mediterranean. Once again there is a race for Africa, and so far Britain is winning. Once again, as in ancient history, the Mediterranean sea, dividing Europe from Africa, is the highway of destiny for the human race.

Hoof-Mouth Disease Bars Eire Cattle

DUBLIN, Eire, Jan. 17 (AP)—The government information bureau announce today that the British agriculture department had barred importation into Britain of cattle, pigs, sheep and goats from Eire, northern Ireland and the Isle of Man because of an outbreak of the hoof and mouth disease in County Derry.

FRENCH NAVY WARS IN SIAM

SAIGON, Indo-China, Jan. 17 (AP)—The French Asiatic squadron was declared by French sources today to have sunk two Thai warships and severely damaged a third in the first important naval engagement in the undeclared war between Indo-China and Thailand (Siam).

The encounter was said to have occurred in the gulf of Siam, where the Thai ships were said to have been firing on a French patrol plane. "Several" French units participated.

(It is doubtful if any French naval units larger than destroyers remain in Asiatic waters. The Thai navy has four cruisers and 14 destroyers. Most of these were built in Japan or Italy.)

The French claimed aerial successes against the Thai forces, but admitted they were forced to retreat on land as the Thai soldiers forged toward Sisophon, western Cambodia railhead.

BANGKOK, Thailand, Jan. 17 (AP)—Large-scale, co-ordinated offensives are being carried on by the Thai Army in five sectors along the 1000-mile frontier between Thailand (Siam) and French Indo-China and several Indo-China districts already have been occupied, the Bangkok radio reported tonight.

Thai officials have been installed in these regions and the populations "liberated," declared the broadcast.

"HOLLYWOOD TODAY," by Louella O. Parsons, noted filmland authority appears regularly in the Boston Evening American.

Now is the Time to Beware of Contagious Colds!

At a treacherous time like this, with contagious colds all around you, what you do today may save you and your family a lot of sickness, worry and trouble later.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR SIGN OF NASAL IRRITATION . . . put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today—have them handy, ready to use. Adv

Aid

Every mother is familiar with this action (above), that of "bubbling" the baby at intervals during his feeding and afterward, to ease pressure in stomach. This tot is a premature baby . . . being cared for at the Boston Lying-In Hospital.

Bottle

Since "preemies," as the premature babies are known to the nurses, can neither breathe, nurse nor control their body temperature properly, they have to be fed with a bottle (as above) or a tube . . . and spend much of their early life in a Hess bed (left, background), where they can be given extra oxygen at any desirable temperature. The Boston Lying-In Hospital is an agency of the Greater Boston Community Fund, which opens its 1941 campaign Saturday.

APPRECIATION that can be measured only by putting yourself in the other fellow's place—snuggling into the upturned collar of a warm overcoat, and remembering that here you are in peaceful America, not underground in England dodging a night bomb raid—is voiced in letters from Robert W. Mortimore, Vice Chairman of the Greater Boston Committee of the British War Relief Society, Inc., expressing thanks for the precious cargo of winter clothing that went across on the Christmas Ship For England.

"It was a beautiful idea, wonderfully worked out," Mr. Mortimore wrote to Harold G. Kern, publisher of the Boston Evening American, Record and Sunday Advertiser.

"What you have done for Great Britain will long remain in the minds of not only those who received clothing, but those through whom it was sent."

New England made firm friends by that gesture to Old England. Immediately the plan was unfolded, it found response in the hearts of the people whose continued gifts of wearing apparel, shoes and blankets, went to men, women and little children in beleaguered blacked-out cities on the valiant little island.

Of a Christmas and a New Year made brighter by these gifts, Mr. Mortimore wrote to E. J. Rhatigan, business manager of these papers and Chairman of the Christmas Ship for England:

"The British Relief Society, Inc., thanks you most sincerely for the wonderful work which your committee accomplished with the 'Christmas Ship for England' through the sponsorship of your papers, THE RECORD, AMERICAN and SUNDAY ADVERTISER. The clothing you sent was of the finest quality, and the best shipment the Society has made to England.

"Through the generosity of your readers the response was so great that after sending the Christmas Ship, a New Year's Ship was also sent, filled with clothes donated by your readers, which we are glad to say arrived safely in Britain.

"Many people in Great Britain had a much happier Christmas and New Year as a direct result of the new and slightly used clothing, shoes and blankets which were sent them through the RECORD, AMERICAN and SUNDAY ADVERTISER. Thus, you were the means of letting New England come to the rescue of Old England at a time when they needed it most.

"We have definite information that much suffering was alleviated and the health of many people was assured by the warm clothing which the Christmas and New Year's Ships brought to them.

"This letter of appreciation and thanks would have been sent earlier but we thought we would wait until we could tell you that the two ships had arrived safely, and how pleased the recipients were.

"On behalf of the air-victims and the volunteer fire-fighters of Great Britain, we extend to you our sincere thanks."

These thanks go to every one of the thousands of New Englanders who contributed a total of approximately 1100 cases of clothing to the holds of the Christmas Ships.

WITH THEIR INDUCTION into federal service, Massachusetts' 10,000 men of the 26th (Yankee) Division heard more than the call to the colors. They heard—there is little doubt—the call to win new glories during precarious peace for the famed division which so distinguished itself in the World War and whose regiments, long before losing their old identities in the wartime 26th, had been renowned for valor.

It is nearly a quarter century now since the old Fighting Ninth, the Dandy Fifth, the First Corps Cadets, the Old Sixth and the others were inducted into federal service for America's participation in the World War.

In early 1917 we could not see ahead to the day—although it was to be but a comparatively early day—when "the 26th Division" would become proud words in New England's military history, which is filled with proud words.

The Yankee Division, it became called popularly, and at its head was placed a man as little known then in this area as the new outfit's name was strange—Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards.

The old distinctions seemingly had been lost in the new identity, there was a stranger leading the boys, and there was great regret. But there were still the old traditions.

Days went by, weeks passed, months—and then came word that the first of the 26th had gone under fire at Chemin-des-Dames and had come up smiling—with many prisoners.

There came Chateau Thierry, Xivray, Torsai, Belleau, the Dubresse Wood, Bauveau, St. Mihiel and the other hells of fire, and the 26th went gallently through.

Some of those men of 1917 and 1918 were among officers inducted again into federal service with the modern 26th Division, some of them men who went into the last war as privates and came out with commands.

In France they upheld the traditions of the old Fighting Ninth, the Dandy Fifth and the rest, and they performed new feats which have become new traditions. Not a man of the present 26th is there who does not know them. And not a man is there who will not uphold them.

As our policy is both sides of all questions any suggestions as to answers to "What Is Man?" will be welcomed.

IN 1940 style dictators ruled skirts should be 18 inches from the ground. Perhaps it was 16. Anyway experts at New York's recent fashion show stated: "In 1941 skirts will be shorter." Remember that ditty "They're Wearing Them Higher in Hawaii." Looks as if the Hula-Hula girls are going to be outdistanced by the American women this year. Suppose in 1942 our feminine friends will be wearing ballet style skirts. As for female bathing attire in 1941 note one seller of same is using a slogan: "The less suit—the more sun."

CLARE BOOTHE, Dorothy Thompson's dearest enemy, from her play "The Women" received over three hundred thousand dollars in royalties. From her first husband, George Brokaw, she received a divorce settlement of four hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. And now she is married to Henry Luce, a millionaire.

"NO WOMAN weighing over one hundred and forty pounds can be beautiful," says a charm and beauty expert. A ridiculous statement. There are many women weighing over one hundred and forty who are beautiful. At the peak of her popularity Lillian Russell weighed one hundred and sixty-five pounds.

AMONG my souvenirs of the merry Yuletide season I have found a set of "Barnyard Golf" instruments. Never pitched horseshoes before but yesterday I tried it. And tossed three ringers in no time at all. Maybe I am a born horseshoe pitcher. Is said in a regulation horseshoe pitching match the participants each lift and throw a ton of iron . . . Is being said two-thirds of the operations for the removal of the appendix are unnecessary. Not so long ago an eminent man of medicine said if all surgeons were paid on a salary basis there wouldn't be nearly so many operations.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17—These columns seem to be so filled with activities these days, that I have difficulty in mentioning some of the things that I am enjoying most. I must mention that on Tuesday evening the Philadelphia Orchestra, with Miss Helen Jepson as guest artist, gave us a most enchanting evening.

I had to arrive a little late, which I consider a crime at a concert, but the gentlemen were talking during dinner with the President and I could not very well tear them away. From the moment we did arrive until the end of the evening, all of us forgot the cares of this world in the joys of music.

At the end of the concert, I went to the infantile paralysis dinner, and heard some interesting speeches.

To return to more recent happenings, I can tell you of a visit yesterday from a committee representing the United Artists. They feel that it is most important that the gains which have been made through the government's recognition of the artists should not be lost because of the national defense program.

THEREFORE, they are going to take up with various people the possibility of useful service to the whole defense effort. I think this is a very good approach to find new outlets for both artists and craftsmen, and I hope it will mean a greater realization that art is something which has a place in every phase of American life. I am still anxious that Art Week should be continued as a yearly thing, until all of us learn to buy, as well as to admire at a distance in museums, the creations of our artists.

Yesterday afternoon the general board of the Federation of Women's Clubs came to tea with me. Later, Mr. S. E. Henig came with Mr. Goris to tell me that the Belgian Pavilion at the World's Fair is being given by the Belgian government to the United States as an addition to Virginia Union University for Negroes.

MONEY will have to be raised to take the building down, transport it and erect it, but this gesture of friendship has significance in a world at war. It is not only a gesture of international good will, but a gesture of interracial good will, because it is to be erected on the campus of a college devoted to the higher education of Negroes.

Last evening some of us went to see "The Cream in the Well" by Lynn Riggs. This is a most interesting play, well written and well acted. At moments I think it is a little too tragic, and I wish there had been a few light touches here and there. We spent an interesting evening, but don't go if you are just on pleasure bent.

CHILD SAYS GARBO'S HOST IS FUSSY

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—Phil Baker took his seven-year-old daughter, Margo, to lunch at Rumpelmayer's. Greta Garbo and Gaylord Hauser arrived there and were seated at the next table . . . The Bakers couldn't help but hear Hauser give his order in a rather loud voice to the waiter. The dietitian ordered a salad for himself and for Miss Garbo. Then he complained to the waiter that the dressing was not quite right—and needed more paprika which was brought . . . "And now lemon," Hauser continued . . . The waiter obeyed . . . "Not a half a lemon," Hauser snapped. "A whole lemon." The waiter brought him a whole lemon . . . Margo Baker could not restrain herself. The seven-year-old stood up, faced Gaylord Hauser and said: "Aren't you fussy!"

GUY ROBERTSON and his wife, Audrey Christie, will take their baby with them when they start work in the Chicago company of "My Sister Eileen" . . . On the day the baby arrived Robertson was extremely nervous, and his wife told him: "Go home and take a drink. When it's all over I'll call you" . . . The jittery star went home and tried to quiet his nerves with Scotch . . . In due time the new mother telephoned the new father and began: "Guy? This is Audrey" . . . Robertson answered: "Audrey? who'sh Audrey?"

WHEN Quentin Reynolds required hospitalization in London, on his admittance card he wrote, replying to the next-of-kin query: "Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy." A few days ago Reynolds' uncle, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, gave a party in his nephew's honor. Kennedy arrived and demanded his due—as the legally-recorded next of kin. But another guest, the former American Ambassador to Germany, Gerard, claimed closer kinship—because he favors the aid-to-Britain bill.

BECAUSE the new Moss Hart show, "Lady in the Dark," concerns psychoanalysis, a group of the most eminent psychoanalysts at Harvard and the rest of New England attended the first performance in Boston . . . Hart was interested in getting their reaction, and a few days later he asked one of them what he thought of the play . . . "Frankly, I've received a number of complaints from my patients as a result of the show," the analyst confided. "They say that in your play the analyses went off smoothly, with little difficulty, and seemed so simple" . . . "Well, you tell them not to complain," Hart reassured. "Tell them that the man who wrote it just can't wait to get back to his analyst."

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT is establishing a central registration bureau for the countless number of business executives who wish to volunteer for $1-a-year jobs in the defense program . . . The Columbia Broadcasting System will present a series of 13 programs about democracy and our liberties. James Boyd, the novelist now working with the government, is in charge of the arrangements. The programs will be written gratis by some of the most distinguished playwrights in America and will include Eugene O'Neill, Bob Sherwood, William Saroyan, Marc Connelly and Maxwell Anderson . . . Irwin Shaw, whose "Retreat to Pleasure"—which had a Florida setting—was panned by the critics, decided to get away from it all after the show closed. He sailed for a cruise on the Manhattan which was beached, and now he's stranded in Florida.

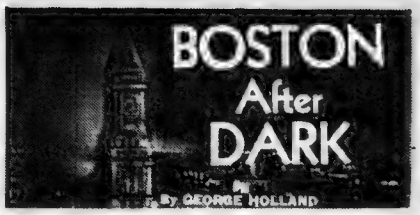
BEFORE THE STORY first broke about the impending arrival of sextuplets to a mother in Guatemala, Gen. Jorge Ubico, the country's dictator, telephoned Alexander King, the editor, whom he knew . . . Ubico, mindful of Guatemala's economies, first had the charges reversed and then tipped King to the story, which ultimately was disproved . . . The editor was reluctant to believe it. "Hold on and I'll have the doctor confirm it," Ubico stated and gave the phone to an American doctor working in Guatemala for one of the medical foundations here . . . "Did you take X-rays?" asked King . . . "Yes," said the doctor . . . "I didn't know there was an X-ray machine in Guatemala," said King . . . "There is," assured the doctor. "They use it for inspecting letters and for packages received by the officials."



THE PATENT HAIRED WHIZ from South America, Desi Arnaz, is routed toward Boston via Florida . . . It was Boston's verdict on young Arnaz' performance in "Too Many Girls" which launched the slim South American on his career as glamour boy . . . He is working now in the Miami unit of Lou Walters' Latin Quarter chain . . . And a bulletin from the Florida resort advises that a Boston booking, also at a Latin Quarter, is being arranged.

SENOR ARNAZ WENT SOUTH for pleasure rather than business . . . His recent bride, Lucille Ball, accompanied him . . . Neither intended to work . . . But Mr. Walters' persuasive powers annexed Desi for his thriving nightclub

HEADING EAST FOR NEW YORK—and also possibly for Boston—is Milton Berle . . . Mickey Rodstone has been trying to acquire the new Berle, whose face has been sculpted in the nasal region, as a headliner at the Mayfair . . . Berle left Hollywood as a potential benefactor . . . There is a slight chance that he has furnished the crack to end all cracks about Bing Crosby's horses.

"THE HORSES RACING in the Crosby silks," remarked the versatile Milton, "have not won a race for so long that they are singing 'Am I Glue?'"

AS IF "LIFE WITH FATHER" wasn't a sufficiently sizeable bonanza to maintain Authors Howard Lindsay (once of Roxbury and Russel (Buck) Crouse in the manner to which they have grown accustomed, the boys have produced the funniest show of the new year, "Arsenic and Old Lace" . . . As well as being part owners, they are the anonymous co-authors and share in the royalties with Joseph O. Kesselring.

IN A HIGHLY UNORTHODOX THEATRICAL season, "Arsenic and Old Lace" is certainly as much of a novelty as "Pal Joey," a musical comedy which casts a low-life as its hero . . The new "comedy" is based on a set of perfectly horrific homicides, performed by a pair of old females . . . Yet the play is said to be so funny that the volume of laughter is drowning out the plot.

"MR. AND MRS. NORTH" IS THE name of another comedy-drama, which depends for popularity on the comic lines and situations interjected by Playwright Owen Davis to motivate a pair of gruesome slayings . . . This one features pert Peggy Conklin, who distinguished herself in Boston last, in Robert E. Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest" . . Those Bostonians who summer near Skowhegan will recall seeing "Mr. and Mrs. North" at the Lakewood Playhouse six or seven months ago.

SPEAKING OF MR. SHERWOOD, your reporter is pleased to report that in the service of His Majesty, the King of England, in the last war, Bob did not forfeit his American citizenship . . . We suspected in this space on Jan. 6 that he had.

OUR CONFUSION came with the knowledge that Mr. Sherwood was a member of the Harvard class of 1918 . . . And the knowledge that he had served with the famous Black Watch in the first World War . .

SECRETARY OF WAR Newton D. Baker made a ruling late in '17 which forbade American boys to enlist in any foreign service, one penalty being loss of citizenship. We were under the impression that Mr. Sherwood had been graduated with his class . . . If so, he would have had to enlist after the Baker ruling In a letter to this department, which we have requested Mr. Sherwood's permission to publish, the author of "Idiot's Delight" and "There Shall Be No Night," makes known that he attended Harvard only two and a half years . . . When he "joined up" there was no law against an American so doing. His roots go deep into New England, for as long back as 100 years before the Revolution, Playwright Sherwood informed us.

DEANNA DURBIN TO GO ON GOOD-WILL TOUR

By Louella O. Parsons

Deanna Durbin

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17 (INS)—A very bright idea on the part of the Universal executives to send Deanna Durbin on a good-will tour visiting five key cities. It's to be something new and different in the line of a tour, for Deanna won't appear in a single theater

Instead, it's to be a social get-together with the little Durbin girl meeting the boys who sell her pictures and also the critics and the press of the country. Deanna first visited Chicago. Next she will be in Washington for the inauguration, Miami for the premiere of "Back Street," followed by stops in Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas

NAN WYNN

I don't know what Vaughn Paul is doing while his girl friend is gone because they are soooo in love. But not only is this tour a good idea for Deanna but for the entire Universal company. I can guarantee the critics they'll fall for Deanna, for she's so likeable and real. Joe Pasternak is holding up recording the songs of the next picture, "Ready For Romance," because he believes this jaunt will do much for his famous protege

I WAS GREATLY attracted to Nan Wynn when I heard her sing in Chicago at the Pump Room. The girl is different and she has a way of sitting on top a table when she does her "Blues" numbers. The table is as much a feature of her singing as sitting on a piano is associated with Helen Morgan—that's why Mark Hellinger, associate producer of "Navy Blues," urged her to sign with Warners. She has a voice that is so throaty and deep in its tones that she brought many people to the Pump Room to hear her sing. Now she will get her movie chance with Jack Oakie, Eddie Albert and Jack Haley.

BET YOU'D FORGOTTEN—I almost had—that the first picture Jimmy Stewart made was "Rose Marie" with Jeanette MacDonald. That was before they discovered that he had sex appeal, so our long, lanky hero was cast as her brother. Now comes word that Jimmy and Jeanette will be reunited again in "Smilin' Through," and they're a surprising duet, if you ask me, since the new version of this popular story will be handled as a musical. Years ago Norma Talmadge made "Smilin' Through" and later Norma Shearer did it with Freddy March. Many fans thought it was the best picture either ever made. Unless they've discovered some new crooning talents in Jimmy I doubt very much if he will do any of the singing—but leave that department to Jeanette.

NEVER MEANT to imply that I was laughing at the old film "The Great Train Robbery" when I hinted that Republic would remake the pioneer opus. Fred Turner sent an interesting letter taking me to task for writing that it made me laugh to think back on the old flicker. He says: "Louella, the filming of that picture was one of the most important events in motion picture history. The men and women who worked in it were the real pioneers of our present day movies. True, it was crude and the acting exaggerated but behind it all was a firm belief in the future of motion pictures." Sorry, Fred—and I know you'll be glad to know that Republic is really going to town on the remake, putting Bob Steele and Monte Blue in the top spots

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Linda Hayes and Lou Crosby, radio announcer, are expected to make it a week-end marriage; friends of Mrs. John Carradine are greatly worried over her condition following the death of a new-born baby. She was given three transfusions and Carradine called off all studio engagements pending her recovery; Ann Harding has bought the Brian James ranch at Oceanside; Jackie Coogan and Ernestine Witte have discovered each other; James Craig is greatly embarrassed over publicity efforts to team him romantically with Michele Morgan. He is a happily married man and the father of an 11-months-old baby; the pretty redhead dancing with Franchot Tone at the Mocambo was Frances Neal, once Artie Shaw's big moment; Edgar Bergen and John Reber in tails and high hats, took the eye of everyone in the room; Brenda Joyce and Owen Ward will have their wedding reception at the Beverly Hills Hotel—only a handful of people who attend the ceremony will be present;

Tobin Urges All Hub Aid Community Fund

Birthday Ball Seen Best Ever

That this year's President's birthday Ball at the Boston Garden Jan. 30 will be the equal of any held in the past was the prediction today of U. S. Atty. Edmund J. Brandon following an organization meeting.

Brandon, recently named as the new general chairman of the party, said half the proceeds would go to the national foundation and the other half to Suffolk County institutions and organizations combatting infantile paralysis.

Mayor Tobin, honorary chairman, said the Boston ball last year raised more funds than any other single party in the country and pledged the support of municipal employes, who last year sold 12,000 tickets.

Edward D. Hasean, Asst. U. S. Atty., was appointed vice-chairman and Daniel O'Brien, a deputy collector of internal revenue, was named director of the ball's headquarters in Washington st.

U. S. FLEET IS READY TO ATTACK

(Far out in the blue Pacific lies Hawaii, a tropical paradise. But Hawaii is more than a paradise now. It is a fortress upon which may rest the welfare of the United States. In Washington, the situation in the Pacific is watched with concern. The following article is the fifth in a series comprising a frank exposition of the military situation in Hawaii.)

By RICHARD HALLER
International News Service Special Correspondent

HONOLULU, Jan. 17 (INS)—United States naval forces centered in Hawaiian waters, these days never less than two-thirds of the entire fleet, are ready to attack if war should come in the Pacific.

Theoretically, the words attack and offensive are not in the dictionary of American military preparedness; everything is defense, and the spending of $100,000,000 and more on armaments in the Pacific area is called a defense program.

But a large part of it is definitely for offensive warfare, and most strategists declare that any war in the Pacific, whether defensive or punitive, would necessitate offensive effort by the armed forces of the United States.

MUST CARRY FIGHT

There is no war machine in the Far East, they say, prepared to venture as far from home as Hawaii or Alaska, but since the United States is committed to resist attempts at expansion southward by Far Eastern powers, and possibly territorial acquisitions of the Axis nations, it would be necessary for the fleet to carry any fight to the areas threatened.

That is why bases are being pushed to completion at Midway and Wake Islands northwest and west of Hawaii, where the trans-Pacific clippers pause, and south of Hawaii near the equator at Palmyra, Canton and others of the "Line" group.

Not too much is known about what is going on at those remote atolls. They are no steamer stops. Workmen and materials are transported by Army and Navy. Clipper passengers catch only scant outlines. But dredges have been towed from Honolulu to scoop out harbors and underground fuel tanks have been shipped to at least some of the islands.

FIELDS FOR PLANES

Fields for land planes and channels for seaplanes have been provided, and fuelling stations for small surface craft have been constructed.

Offensive naval war in the western Pacific would require a tremendous service of supply of which Honolulu and Pearl Harbor would be the heart. Even there oil, ammunition and food would be free six to 10 days nearer than the Pacific coast. Wake Island, some 2000 miles westward from Hawaii, will be ready to serve in similar but lesser capacity, and Guam, another 1000 miles westward, will not be useless, even though defenses there are not so far advanced.

With Singapore and Hongkong bases for supply stations and with the string of secondary bases stretching across the Pacific from the main base at Pearl Harbor, there is scarcely an area more than 1000 miles from a source of fuel.

KEYSTONE OF ARENA

And Pearl Harbor is the keystone of this great Pacific arena. Lying more than 2000 miles west of the Pacific coast, it is now the mightiest naval base in the world.

Some of the program is not yet completed, but the job started less than a year and a half ago is well ahead of schedule and Pearl Harbor is ready even now for any emergency.

The United States is ready to fight westward better than any foreign power could fight eastward across the Pacific.

Rookies at Camp Hulen Wait Anti-Aircraft Test

tingling moment when they would nerve into the combat lines? Frankly, yes! Very emphatically yes! For youth is impetuous, heedless and headlong, and the 211th would like to see the effect of their scholarship in terms of an enemy aircraft hurtling earthward, a funnel of smoke from its fuselage, and bits of fabric tearing loose, and the pilot bailing out.

For war, curiously, is an impersonal business and the overhead planes on which the 211th fix their practice sights have long since ceased to be piloted by life, brains, blood and bones. In the minds of these Boston [illegible]ners, light crews and technicians of the regiment, they are just "targets," as impersonal a quarry as the mallards which duck hunters shoot from a marshy blind.

STRANGELY TRIVIAL

One thing—it seems strangely trivial in so robust a business—the 211th resents. The War Department removed the "Mass." which was previously superimposed over the gold-plated US which they wear on their collars. Now it's the plain twin-letters US without state identification, an order intended to give the National Guard equal rank with the regulars.

But the boys prefer their state insignia. Indeed, you'll find the 211th regimental coat of arms—a colorful shield with the Latin legend "Monstrat Viam" (we show the way) on every imaginable thing—trunks, barracks, bags, leather jerkins, company bulletin boards, etc. They're like college boys who have won their first varsity letter. Pride attaches to small things. Men die for tradition.

On Feb. 6 the First Battalion will strike its canvas village on this sandy dune where a torrid sun vies with sharp wind and sudden rain. Then it will trek back to Hulen to meet its 2nd Battalion mates and the 300 "selectives" who are being chaperoned by 211th officers, non-coms and men from Boston next week.

ALREADY PREPARED

The camp area is already prepared for the newcomers, tents in place, mess halls smelling of fresh paint and new pine, recreation centers and infirmaries finished.

They have the better of it. The new soldiers will be inducted into camp life graciously (they'll like their colonel) and within a few weeks shake off the first pangs of home hunger. And soon, as the 211th so universally says, "Hell, they get to like it." Of such is the kingdom of rugged, wind-blown manhood.

Chicken Heart Alive, Growing in Its 29th Year

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (INS)—The sliver of chicken heart which Dr. Alexis Carrel, the famous scientist, has been keeping artificially alive was 29 years old today.

Dr. Carrel disclosed that the tissue is not only still alive in its plasma bath but has continued to grow. It has to be cut down periodically or it would attain enormous size, he explained.

30 Tuna Snack Au Gratin New Idea

By MARTHA LEE

The hostess who enjoys preparing Sunday night spreads, after-skating parties, or impromptu meals on wintry days generally scouts around for new ideas once in awhile. And we hope to hold her attention today because we have something new to tell her about—a delicious hot tuna sandwich au gratin.

It's made with creamed tuna which is piled generously on crisp buttered toast, sprinkled with cheese, and broiled—and it's as nourishing as it is delicious. Serve it with a crisp green salad and steamingly fragrant tea for a satisfying and tempting repast. Toasted squares of cornbred may be used as the base of the sandwich for a pleasing variation. Just split the squares of cornbred, butter and toast under the broiler.

TUNA SANDWICH AU GRATIN

4 slices bread
Butter
1 7-ounce can tuna
2 tbsp. flour
1-3 cup boiling water
1 2 3 cups irradiated evaporated milk
Salt and pepper
1 cup grated American cheese

Spread bread lightly with butter. Cut slices in two diagonally and place slices in buttered baking pan or individual buttered baking dishes. Set under broiler to toast to a golden brown. Prepare a white sauce of the oil drained from tuna, flour, water and milk. Add tuna that has been flaked with a fork. Pour over toasted bread. Cover with cheese and set under broiler until bubbling hot and cheese is melted. Two cups diced cooked chicken, turkey, or a combination of these with tuna may be used for the sandwich. Makes 4 servings.

CHINESE CABBAGE SALAD

Separate leaves of Chinese cabbage and cut crosswise in one-inch slices; let stand in ice water until crisp, then drain and serve with French dressing with olives.

FRENCH DRESSING WITH OLIVES

4 tbsp. salad oil
¾ tbsp. lemon juice
1½ tbsp. orange juice
½ tsp. onion juice
½ tsp. chopped parsley
4 stuffed olives, sliced thin
1-3 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. mustard
½ tsp. paprika
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Mix all ingredient and shake well in a bottle with tight cover.

GOLDEN CORN BREAD

1 cup flour
1 tsp. salt
3 tps. baking powder
2 tbsp. sugar
¾ cup yellow corn meal
2 beaten eggs
1 cup milk
¼ cup melted shortening

Sift flour, salt, baking powder and sugar; mix with corn meal. Combine eggs, milk and shortening; add to dry ingredients and beat until smooth. Bake in greased nine-inch square pan in moderately hot oven (400 deg. F.) about 20 minutes.

FRUIT NECTAR SHERBET

1 can plum nectar
½ cup sugar
2 tsp. lemon juice
1-8 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. sugar
2 stiff-beaten eggs whites

Combine ½ cup nectar with ½ cup sugar; bring to boiling and simmer 2 minutes. Add remaining nectar, lemon juice, and salt; mix and cool. Freeze to a mush in tray of automatic refrigerator. Add 2 tablespoons sugar to egg whites and fold into frozen mixture. Freeze, stirring once. Makes 4 servings.

DANCE TIP

"Have you this dance taken?" is an unattractive way for a man to ask a girl for a dance. If she hasn't the dance taken, she may be feeling a bit self-conscious about it. The graceful and proper thing to say is, "May I have this dance?"

Manners

Hostess' Invitation Is Necessary

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Is it necessary to remove your wrap when having lunch at a restaurant?

2—What would you think of a young man, or a girl, who spends a week at the home of his or her friend, without an invitation from some other member of the family? Does it seem quite right?

There are others who feel as I do about this so please don't tell us we are "old-fashioned."

WONDERING.

1—No, not at all necessary. It is just a question as to what you wish to do.

2—Indeed, I won't tell you that you are old-fashioned if you regard this as a breach of good form. I consider it a fundamental detail in social form. A young man or a young woman should not pay visits of this kind on the invitation of only the friend herself or himself. It is distinctly necessary to be invited also by the hostess of the home in which the visit is to be made, the mother, or if there is no mother, by the official hostess of the home.

And so important is this invitation that, if it is not forthcoming, the man or the girl may, with perfect propriety, suggest that he or she hesitates to come without such an invitation.

ANSWERING LETTER

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A relative spent some time visiting us, and she wrote us at once to tell us how very much she enjoyed the visit. Is it correct for me to answer her letter, or isn't this necessary?

T. W.

You wouldn't necessarily be expected to answer her letter of thanks for your hospitality, but quite soon it would be gracious for you to write her a letter as you customarily would. If you don't write her fairly soon, she might wonder if she has not been a good guest. In other words, complete silence on your part would not be generous to her.

Smart Set Fashions

TWO COLORS are better than one, three better than two . . . and certainly the clever tiering of shades in a new wool jersey puts emphasis on a slender midriff in an unmistakable way. The wool jersey fabric has a story to tell, too . . . it is a new rayon satin-backed jersey which falls in graceful folds, slenderizing but not clinging. Good idea for those allergic to wool, but susceptible to its fashion rightness and charm.— ANNICE BRINK.

Love and Marriage

Step Out, Young Man!

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going steady with a girl for almost a year now, but recently she became acquainted with another young man. Although she has never gone out with him (he has driven her to the office twice) she keeps talking about him and wonders what he is doing.

She says she doesn't know which one of us she loves the best. I'm very much in love with her and do not wish to break up with her, neither does she with me. She says she may find that I'm the one she really loves, and then I may be gone. But I can't keep on going with her, thinking that probably she loves the other young man.

The boy who has never taken her out is now in the Army and will go to camp for a year. Do you think she will wait until he comes out of the Army before she gives me the air? She may want me to stay just so she'll have someone to go with while he's away.

PUZZLED

It looks to me as if this young lady is more in love with love than with either of you two boys. Under the circumstances I'd try not to take the affair too seriously.

If you enlarged your circle of acquaintances by one or more attractive girls, and took them out occasionally, I think it might be helpful as a solution to your problem.

You Can Be Beautiful

'Paint Red' for Conquest

By ARLINGOULD

YOU NEEDN'T hanker after the opportunity to wear colorful American Indian inspired fashions . . . and think you can't just because a cruise or a Miami sojourn is not on your slate. There are innumerable fashion gayeties you can pick up to accent sober basic colors . . . and you can start off immediately with a new make up . . . "paint red" . . . and brilliant as the sun on warriors' conquest paint!

It can be your out-for-conquest color too . . . and you'll take care, to get the best effect out of this sunny, primitive red, to give you face a touch of sunny bronze foundation . . . No one'll ever know you haven't just come back from Guayaquil or Curacao.

Certainly if you are packing for the South, you'll not omit a complete makeup based on this exciting "paint red."

It's delightful with bright red and orange . . . contrasts richly with sharp greens, pale pottery blues, golden yellows, dark greens, yellows. And they say it's divine with Indian earth shades . . . all the rich browns, like Indian buck skin and saddle.

Suppose you've decided that at long last you're going to vacation in the dude ranch country . . . where men look like cowboys but may be brokers . . . and girls look like rodeo queens even though they're thankful western saddles are practically rocking chairs and not slippery leather mats . . . this is the correct makeup!

"Paint red" will look marvelous with blue jeans and a ten gallon hat . . . and since there are no gentle colors in cowboy kerchiefs, you'll do well to forget pastel lipsticks ever existed. And it's also an appropriately brilliant tint to go with ski fashion accents . . . which are never pale and insipid . . . the slalom flag reds, mountaineer greens, and sun gold yellows.

If you'd like complete information on this new makeup . . . "paint red" . . . phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Little Man, You've Had a Busy Day!

Repossessed
By L. Ernenwein

LINDA LOOKED at the slick-haired man and shivered a little inside. Not that she was afraid of him. She wasn't afraid of any man. A girl loses fear fast in a Broadway dime-a-dance palace. But the other things take longer to lose . . .

Slick-Hair held out a string of tickets, said smoothly: "Come on, luscious. Let's swing it."

Linda thought: He'll try to squeeze a dollar's worth of breath out of me for every dime he spends. She took the tickets and murmured: "Thanks."

But Slick-Hair didn't try to collect. Not at first. He didn't ask how long she'd been a taxi-dancer, or say she was too beautiful to be wasting her time in a place like this.

In fact, he didn't say anything at all. If it hadn't been for the pomade scent of his patent-leather hair, Linda could have almost forgotten she was dancing with him.

She remembered what one of the other girls had told her the first night she'd worked here: "It ain't so bad," Molly Muldoon had explained in friendly fashion. "It pays better than burlesque—and you ain't so apt to catch pneumonia.

"This is strictly a give 'em a smile proposition. You give 'em a smile and grab their tickets. They'll promote you with everything from a beer at Sloppy Joe's to being Miss America at Atlantic City. But there's no law against turning 'em down. After you've polished the wax for a week you'll be able to dance with all sorts of monkeys without feeling them near you."

Now Linda knew what Molly Muldoon meant.

BRINGS MEMORIES

So, for a time, Linda forgot Slick-Hair entirely. The band played "Where or When," that song making her recall things which had nothing to do with Broadway dance mills at all.

The music brought mind-mirrored visions of an elm-bordered campus . . . a boy and a girl sitting in a dusk-veiled stadium long after the football crowds had departed.

The Cast of Characters in "Repossessed"

LINDA, a dime-a-dance girl who knows all the answers, but forgets them when she dances with MIKE, a writer whose appearance suggests he is yet to hit his stride.

Linda hummed a line of the song: "I can't remember where or when . . ."

But she could remember. Too well. So well that it hurt, like having something in your throat that you couldn't quite swallow, something that got worse when you went to your cheap little room alone night after night.

She had met the boy in her junior year at college. They'd been gloriously happy, happier than any two people ever had been. But afterward they'd quarreled, and somehow the boy hadn't seemed to need her any more. So she had left him, and now she was dancing for dimes . . .

NOT PANICKY

These were the things Linda remembered through three dances. Until Slick-Hair suddenly drew her close—so close that the thin partition of garments between them seemed like no partition at all.

"How about you and me stepping out, after this merry-go-round closes shop," he suggested confidently.

There had been a time when Linda would have felt panicky at this urgent invitation. But not now. She even smiled, and recalled all the excuses she had used in refusing dates. There was the one about having a sick mother who sat up waiting for her to come home.

Then there was the one about having an unemployed husband. That didn't work either. In fact it seemed to make them all the more anxious to date you.

Strange, how some men considered a married woman fair game. It made you wonder what they thought about love, and romance.

"Do you talk free or does that call for another ticket?" he asked casually.

Maybe they didn't think about those things, maybe they were too busy hunting.

She said: "I've got a date with Dutch Schulte's chauffeur. His boss is throwing a party up in Yorkville tonight.

That registered. It always did.

He said: "You travel high, don't you, baby?"

Linda smiled, and mentally chalked up another score for the system Molly Muldoon called "Mind over what's the matter."

Molly had explained it like this:

"Dance-hall Johnnies are mostly wise guys who want something soft and easy to handle. They don't want any part of a dame who travels with Schulte's uptown mob, on account of them Yorkville gorillas play plenty rough.

MEETS PROBING EYES

So Slick-Hair finished cut his tickets and departed. Whereupon Linda stood in the "hostess corral" and wondered what she'd do when a decent date came along. A girl couldn't go on being lonely forever . . .

She was still wondering about that when she saw the tall young man in the gray tweed suit . . . and felt a jitter of excitement ripple up into her throat.

He bowed, said with mocking politeness: "The name is Tolliver, ma'am—Mike Tolliver. Shall we dance?"

Linda thought quickly: He's going to be formal, and very polite. He's going to show me how a gentleman treats a taxi-dancer. Later on he'll ask me to go home with him . . .

She nodded, and automatically accepted the tickets he handed her. They moved out into the gliding slow-motion parade of swaying couples. Linda noticed that his brown hair needed trimming. It curled at the ends in a way that gave him a shaggy, almost boyish appearance.

FACES SITOUT QUIZ

He asked casually: "Do you talk free—or does that call for an extra ticket?"

Linda noticed that some of the other girls were glancing at Mike Tolliver — saw Molly Muldoon smile knowingly from the "corral." She said: "No extra charge," and because he was the best looking man on the floor she felt a little quiver of pride run through her.

After the second dance Mike Tolliver suggested liquid refreshment. They took a table in a far corner and he asked cynically: "What do you tell customers your name is?"

"Linda Shannon," she told him, then added apologetically: "I have to take a ticket for each dance we sit out. They have spotters watching."

"How long have you been abusing your ten little toes in this treadmill?" he inquired.

HEART SKIPS

Linda thought: Now it's coming. He's going to tell me I'm too fine a girl to be pawed by dancehall denizens, too fragile and sensitive to take the bumps in a place like this. Then he'll suggest we talk the whole thing over—in private.

She said: "Three nights. Two hundred and forty dances, including sitouts."

"And before that?"

Linda eased back in her chair. She asked: "What is this, a Dewey investigation," then added maliciously: "Anyway, you're paying for it. I did two weeks in the chorus of a show that was ignored to death, and before that I was just a nice uptown girl with high ideals and a lot of pride. Now it's your turn to talk. How long have you been prowling Broadway dance halls, and what else have you been doing?"

"Too long," he reflected, "and I've been practicing how to become the greatest unpublished writer east or west of the Rockies."

"What else?" she prompted archly.

"I've been living alone, and not liking it. Let's dance."

While they were walking back to the dance floor he said flatly: "I'm leaving after this one," and Linda's heart skipped a beat.

Then he added: "I'll wait downstairs for you, 10 minutes."

Linda thought: He's awfully sure of himself. I should turn him down cold. But I'm lonesome as the devil.

DEMANDS KISS

She murmured: "All right," and five minutes later, when they met at the street entrance, she said accusingly: "The manager fired me, for leaving so early."

"Forget you ever saw that dump," he suggested.

They got into a cab, and because he didn't seem to have anything to say, Linda didn't say anything either. Vitations, waiting for this one.

The cab stopped in front of an apartment house on West 73rd st. Linda's heart thumped hard as she waited for him to pay the driver. She had known it would be this way, eventually. But knowing didn't seem to make any difference, it didn't keep her from feeling breathless and jittery, and wabbly in the knees.

He escorted her across the sidewalk, into the dimly-lit foyer. The thought came to Linda that she had been desperately lonely, that she had turned down a hundred in-

They got out at the fifth floor and walked down the hall to a rear apartment. Mike unlocked the door, then stepped aside, waiting for her to precede him.

Linda saw a satisfied smile loosen his ips, changing the stubborn lines of his face and putting a glow into his steady blue eyes. In that fleeting moment, she glimpsed a questing eagerness, thinly masked. Then he pushed her inside.

He said: "Turn on the light."

Linda faced him. "Kiss me first," she demanded.

He closed the door, said. "You're a fine wife—running off and leaving me for almost a month."

"But you said I was a pain in the neck. You said you couldn't write because I talked too much!"

A sheepish grin pushed the scowl from Mike Tolliver's face. "I haven't written a word since you left," he admitted.

Then he kissed her in a way that told Linda how much he needed her.

THIS isn't a musical quiz program, but do you know what "a cappella' means? . Unless you've had a musical education we'll bet you don't know and you can't find it in the dictionary either unless you have one of those big thick models . . .

So, to save you the research we'll break down and tell . . . An a cappella choir is one which sings absolutely without the accompaaiment of any musical instrument . .

Needless to say, the singers in such a choir have to have rare skill and beauty of tone as they must get along without pitch pipes or tuning-forks .

The a cappella singers of St. Olaf College in Minnesota, one of our finest choirs, is coming to Boston tc give a concert in Symphony Hall on Jan. 28th for the benefit of the New England Committee for Refugees, and needless tc say, musical devotees are eagerly awaiting this auspicious occasion . . .

The choir is conducted by Dr. F. Manlius Christiansen, veteran musical leader who came to America as a 'teen age prodigy from his native Norway . . . He has spent 50 years here perfecting the art of unaccompanied choral singing . . .

'CHAD HANNA' SCORES WITH TENDER REALISM

Met Film Is Story of Circus Life

By PEGGY DOYLE

There's a certain magic quality about the Metropolitan screen's new attraction, "Chad Hanna," which erases the years and takes you back to the kid who wanted to run away with the circus.

It is as far away from now as your childhood when circuses were as wonderful as Christmas and the bareback rider as remotely beautiful as the star-spangled angel on the glittering Christmas tree's topmost branch.

Nunnally Johnson, who adapted Walter D. Edmonds' book for 20th Century-Fox, has maintained the author's leisurely pace in the script and technicolor has reproduced its gaudy colors to a mesmerizing degree.

Resisting the ordinarily irresistible Hollywood temptation to dream it up, Johnson, who doubled as producer, has hewed to Edmonds' simple, tender story of a small-town boy who ran away with a wagon circus, fell in love with a glamorous circus rider and discovered before it was too late that his true love was his quietly lovely wife, a runaway from a brutal father.

Henry Fonda's Chad Hanna is a sensitive, sincere portrayal nicely contrasted by Dorothy Lamour's tinselled circus rider. As the runaway country girl who becomes the wagon show's chief equestrienne and marries the idolized neighborhood boy, the youthful Miss Darnell is pleasing.

The supporting players, too, are well cast, notably Guy Kibbee, as the circus owner; Jane Darwell, who was such a true-to-the-book Ma to Fonda's Tom Joad in "Grapes of Wrath," as his wife and the surprisingly credible appearing circus fat-woman; the lion-taming Roscoe Ates and advance man John Carradine.

Too much cannot be said for the technicolor and photographic compositions that help so materially to make you see Hugenine's one-ringer circus through young Chad's rose-colored glasses of youth.

On the same bill, "She Couldn't Say No," co-starring Roger Pryor and Eve Arden, mixes romance with legal intrigue and breach-of-promise suits.

CLARK GABLE and Vivien Leigh in the year's most publicized romance, "Gone With The Wind," which returns to Loew's State and Orpheum theaters on

BABY ROSE MARIE HIT AT BOSTON

The airlanes' one-time Baby Rose Marie, now a big, beautiful brunette with a new career, is one of the stars of the RKO-Boston's lively, entertaining new stage show.

Equipped with some excellent original arrangements, she offers four numbers in a soprano voice that are definitely listenable. Her first is a medley of popular songs. She follows this with the current favorite, "Only Forever"; a coon-shouting specialty with gestures, "Beat Me, Daddy," and an Italian song that pleased the customers mightily, "Luna Mezzo Mare."

She was called back three or four times before local favorite, Joe Besser and company, including vocalist Jimmy Little, were permitted to come on stage with their irresistably funny and beautifully-timed nonsense.

The show opens with an overture by Larry Flint and his orchestra. They are followed by the Four Co-Eds, prettiest tumbling act on the stage today. They also offer some smooth tap-dancing.

Good-looking Leonard Barr and a toothsome blonde partner named Virgina Estes, next do a comedy dance routine and some eccentric dancing. They are skilled and likable personalities.

Closing the stage show is the hoke comedy act by Cass, Owen and Topsy, internationally famed knockabout artists whose local following was obviously well represented at yesterday's opening show. The applause was well merited.

On the screen, the Boston is presenting "Devil's Pipeline," rugged adventure story which teams Richard Arlen and Andy Devine, and "Doomed Caravan," another stirring "Hopalong" Cassidy adventure, featuring William Boyd.

Charlotte Vogue Featured at Howard

Charlotte Vogue in "Rockin' The Town," the current burlesque revue, is the featured attraction at the Old Howard's midnight show tonight. Heading her supporting cast are S. Fields, Shorty McAllister, James Coughlin, Nora Ford, Jessica Rogers, Mickey Dennis, the Four Jansleys, the Manchinos, Marian Melrose, Dorothy DeHaven, Bert Saunders, Ann and Jane Kingsley, Mel Bishop, Rhea Deana and Joe Sterling.

Bette Davis, Jon Hall In Two Bowdoin Films

Bette Davis in "The Letter," presenting her in the Somerset Maugham play in one of her most dramatic roles, and "Kit Carson," starring Jon Hall in the virile starring role, will be the twin attractions on the Bowdoin screen, starting tomorrow. This program will continue through Tuesday.

Loom Strike Debated as 30 Return

BIDDEFORD, Me., Jan. 17—Thirty loom-fixers at the Pepperell Mfg. Co., returned to work today pending final settlement of their protest over alleged increases in working schedules.

Following a conference of mill officials and a workers' committee, it was announced the loom-fixers would resume work on the 7 a. m. shift and that new conferences would be held later "with regard to alleged grievances."

The loom fixers had asked that they be relieved of tending looms they said were in addition to their regular work.

The 900 workers in the mill's blanket department became idle when the loom fixers left their work during last night's shifts. Departments engaged in making Army sheeting under defense contracts were unaffected, however.

Although the loom fixers are members of the the local union of the United Textile Workers of America, Laurent Fateaux, Biddeford CIO organizer and chairman of the workers' committee, said his organization had not sanctioned the walkout.

BILL CORUM SAYS:

Babe Ruth, Jim Crowley, A Couple of Champions

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—We have just been mulling over what seemed to us as pleasant and heartfelt and sincere a testimonial dinner as it was ever our good fortune to attend. Ford Frick, president of the National League, made a fine talk and Babe Ruth, a big fellow of whom you may have heard, outdid himself.

They were talking about the guests of honor of the evening, the Stevens brothers.

We have already had our say in this space about the family Stevens. What we are thinking as we write this is that not enough is heard and seen these days of Babe Ruth—the big guy who stood alone.

Babe will be the only one of his kind to go by not only in our lifetime, but, I suspect, in all time. It is hard to imagine that there could be another such fabulous figure in sports, or any other walk of life.

I have admiration and a feeling of sincere friendship for Dempsey and Tunney, Bobby Jones and Bill Tilden, Earl Sande, the late Suzanne the Great, and the remarkable Sir Walter Hagen—all members of the Babe's club in the matter of super skill on the fields of sport and in being contemporaneous with him.

BABE POPUI ::

But so far as having the crowds follow him was concerned, the Big Guy was the Pied Piper of them all. Start them out, these greats of the Golden Age of Sports, one by one from 42d st. and let them stroll up Broadway. By the time they reached Columbus Circle, the Big Parade would be in Babe's wake.

He has a sort of all-pervading color and attraction that is hard to define, but which, withal, is very real. Fellows who have known him since he broke in with "Cousin Ed" Barrows' Red Sox—and even Cousin Ed himself, I believe—find it there.

I repeat, that I don't know exactly what it is. But it's just not natural, somehow, not to root for The Babe. And when he is, as he was the other night, pleasant and jovial and compelling . . . Well, then it's mighty hard to figure why he still hasn't got, somewhere, an active place in baseball.

Not that he needs it. Not even that he wants it. I haven't any idea whether he does or not. But simply that there are so few Babe Ruths in this run-of-the-mine world.

What a recreation officer or sports director he would make, if he'd take the job, for an Army camp! For, unless I miss my guess, we fortunate folks in America are going to be talking about him, when the present war, like the last, will be just one of those "incidents" that went by in a lifetime.

OL' KING COTTON CROWLEY

After the dinner, I got a chance to tell Horace Stoneham something that I've been wanting to say in this space ever since I reluctantly departed the hustling and hospitable State of Texas.

After the exciting Cotton Bowl football game, I stuck around Dallas and Ft. Worth for a couple of days and got what might be called the secondary reaction to the game and the Fordham team.

I can't tell you how pleasant it was to find the newspapers and the good people of the Lone Star State boosting the boys from Rose Hill.

Jimmy Crowley, for example, is practically Ol' King Cotton in person down that way now, and they'd not only be happy to have him and his beaten but undaunted Rams back again, they are going to insist on it the first chance they get.

Chief credit for that goes to three gentlemen, Crowley, Father Tynan and Jack Coffey. For, you see, the Texas folks are wise enough in the ways of football—they play it pretty well and pretty hard down there—to know that Fordham could very well have launched a fair kind of country beef had they been that way.

CROWLEY PROUD OF BOYS

It wasn't exactly as though there weren't a few points about which they might have done a bit of serious moaning and groaning. There usually are, from the loser's standpoint, in any close football game.

But Crowley simply said that he was proud of the showing his boys had made and left 'em with that easy Irish smile as he said good by.

I have had the good fortune to go out of New York city with two Bowl football teams. With Columbia to Pasadena and Fordham to Dallas. Of both trips I shall always have pleasant and proud memories.

Winning and losing—and it's quite possible that Fordham won more with that one-point defeat than it could have won with the two or three touchdown victory it might have scored—our New York boys behave in a way to make a fellow proud.

Those Texans are not the sort of people to be unappreciative of that. They're good sportsmen, too, and fully appreciated that they had watched a team lose a really tough one with really good grace.

Big Lom Beefs At Contract

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 17 (AP)—Ernie Lombardi, catcher of the world champion Cincinnati Reds, is not satisfied with the 1941 contract offered him.

The brawny backstop, wintering here, received the Reds' bid, took one look at the figures and returned the contract unsigned.

Lombardi had a $6000 pay cut last season and wanted part of that sum added to his 1941 salary.

The big fellow has been exercising most of the winter by fishing for driftwood in the Oakland surf.

He reports this has strengthened the ankle he injured late in the 1940 season and which kept him on the sidelines through most of the World Series.

Reds' Sale Rumor Spiked

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 17 (INS)—The Cincinnati Reds baseball club is not for sale, Powel Crosley, Jr., club owner and Cincinnati radio magnate, declared today in spiking rumors as to his future plans.

Neither, Crosley asserted, does he intend to sell his interest in the Crosley Corp.

YALE ADMITS GRIDMEN GIVEN FINANCIAL HELP

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 17 (AP)—A Yale scholarship official disclosed today that nearly half of the university's 1940 varsity football squad received "financial aid." Secretary Stuart H. Clement of the committee on award of undergraduate scholarships made this statement in reply to an alumni assertion in the current issue of the alumni magazine that Yale "should welcome football talent that can keep up with academic standards."

Clement declared that of the 39 players on last year's varsity squad, 16 or 41 per cent had been helped.

BARTHOLEMY AIDED

Capt.-elect Alan Bartholemy of Portland, Ore., was among the group, said Clement. He declined to name the others, but emphasized the aid took the form of scholarships, loans or employment and he said was based on general all-around ability.

Eli athletic coaches and alumni have blamed poor records in recent years on a dearth of material and claimed a lack of cooperation from some university authorities.

Clement's statement, specifically answering a criticism by Richard J. Eckhart of New York in the December issue of the magazine, is the latest in a series of repercussions following closely Yale's worst football season (seven defeats in eight games) and a shakeup of the coaching staff early this month in which Emerson (Spike) Nelson replaced Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond as head mentor.

ECKHART'S BLAST

Wrote Eckhart to the Yale Alumni Magazine:

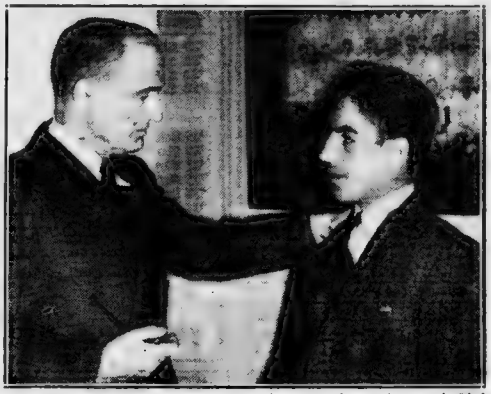
"I believe Yale should encourage good clean football—should welcome football talent that can keep up with the academic standards. It should permit alumni associations to lend a helping hand to school students even if they have attracted attention through athletic endeavors.

"It should properly appraise the fact that football means a great deal to almost every boy entering college and is a desirable experience for the players."

Ed Stevens, president of the Yale Club of Topeka, Kan., declaring that Eckhart "has well spoken the minds of many, if not a large majority of Yale alumni," entered the debate by declaring that "through our efforts" five members of Topeka High School's undefeated and untied eleven "have become intensely interested in Yale."

"If the university authorities co-operate with us," declared Stevens, "you will some day see them wearing the Yale blue in the bowl. If the alumni all over the country will shoulder the responsibility of getting scholarly football players to Yale, we won't have to endure any disastrous seasons in the future.

"Good football teams, as long as they do not smack of professionalism are assets to any university."



PAIR OF ACES—Sid Mercer has heart to heart chat with Phil Rizzuto, flash from Kansas City, who is slated to displace Frank Crosetti at short for Yanks this season. Yanks missed fifth straight flag by only two games last year, but figure they can win this year with help of many rookies from American Ass'n.

McCarthy Eyes Flag; Fears Only Indians

By SID MERCER

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—Joe McCarthy sees the Cleveland Indians as the team to beat in the American League this year.

He suspects the Chicago White Sox may be a "sleeper" and he also seems to think well of the Yankees.

Yes, give Joseph a little time and he'll get around to showing you his hand for 1941. He won't make any prediction, but he isn't going to be astounded if the Yanks regain the heights.

They missed by only two games last fall and there are some changes made.

McCarthy may open the season with an infield keystoned by Phil Rizzuto and Gerald Priddy, the Kansas City pair.

TOGETHER THREE YEARS

"If they go all right down South I'll keep them together," says the boss man. "They've been together for three years, and they've always been a winning combination."

Does McCarthy believe the Yanks can win with freshmen at shortstop and second base?

"Why not?" he counters. "They did it with Koenig and Lazzeri in 1926. Cleveland almost did it with Boudreau and Mack last year. If our two kids are as good as their advance notices I won't split 'em up."

Such talk naturally provokes questions about the status of Joe Gordon.

Gordon is a pretty good country second baseman. In fact, he has just been cited as the outstanding player in that position, having been selected over Bobby Doerr in a national poll for an all-star major league team.

Can the Yankees afford to take Gordon out of the spot where he has starred for three years?

"Well," says McCarthy, "we still have a shortstop named Crosetti and he works pretty well with

Amherst Coach to Speak At All-Scholastic Fete

Lloyd Jordan, head football coach and athletic director at Amherst, will be a guest speaker at the banquet tendered to the Boston Evening American-Daily Record All-Scholastic football team at the Hotel Lenox Monday night.

Jordan is a Pitt graduate who has become one of the most sought speakers in New England since he took over at Amherst.

The schoolboy banquet is a closed affair for the members of the All Scholastic team as selected by the Board of Coaches.

The AllStars have the privilege of bringing a friend to the affair, which will be strictly stag.

All members of the Board of Coaches who picked the team will be on hand to meet, personally, their official All-Scholastic eleven for 1940.

These mentors include Bill Ohrenberger, Boston English; Ed Skip Sherlock, Hyde Park; Bill Broderick, Salem; Dennie Gildea, Everett; Fred Ostergren, Arlington; Jim Mansfield, Haverhill; Harry Downes, Brookline, and George Kenneally, Revere.

The banquet will get underway at 6 p. m. with the deadline at 10 so that the boys from out of town may plan on being home before midnight.

Bruins Toronto Bound After 2-2 Ranger Tie

NEW YORK, Jan. 17—Boston's Bruins, who have gone through nine straight games without a defeat, prepared to leave for Toronto today after playing a 2-2 overtime draw with the Rangers before 10,234 spectators at Madison Square Garden.

The Bruins will play the Leafs in Toronto tomorrow, the Blackhawks in Chicago, Sunday, and then return to Boston where they will meet the Rangers again next Tuesday night.

The two-all game with the Rangers was a thriller of the first water.

SCHMIDT IN FIGHT

Two goals by Lynn Patrick in the same period were the features of a game that saw the first practical results of the league's new rule under which players joining in fights are fined $25.

When Schmidt and Art Coulter tangled in a fist-swinging encounter in the second period the rest of the players stood around in a circle and made no attempt to interfere. The officials separated the two combatants.

Boston's line of Terry Reardon, Gordie Bruce and Pat McReavy opened the scoring in the first period, Reardon scoring and the others getting assists.

PICTURE PLAY

Then in the second Schmidt snared a loose puck in center ice, side-stepped Phil Watson who was ready to check him, eluded the defense, feinted Davie Kerr out of position and back-handed home a deer to place the name of Angus Cameron on their negotiation list. Otherwise, the player in question would have been assigned to the New York club.

WENDY BURNS UP

From my knowledge of the operating methods of the N. H. L., I'd say the trouble started when whoever received the Bruins request made the entry before checking up with the more influential owners.

Realizing they were Caesarated when the Bruins established their rightful claim to Player Cameron via the negotiation list the Governors jibed their none too seaworthy craft at the risk of dismasting and went on another tack.

They voted (and mind you this was after they had given the player to Boston,) that if Cameron turned professional he COULD be signed by any of the New York Ranger "farm" clubs.

That decision prompted Pres. Weston Adams to quit the meeting after declaring he'd never attend another as long as Frank Calder was president.

The current breach between Weston Adams and the N. H. L. may pave the way for the American Hockey League to become THE major league. At least, it is a threat to the Calder organization, which is practically a one man show.

BATTLE OF THE ICE—Milt Schmidt of the Bruins and Art Coulter of the Rangers add a few fistic fireworks to festivities in Madison Square Garden. Battle is being cleared up by Referee Bill Stewart and fellow official. Stewart is shoving Coulter from the scene of action. Bob Bauer (17) of the Bruins bends over Schmidt (15), who is down on the ice. Sticks, gloves and other equipment are scattered on the ice. Both battlers were given five minutes in the penalty box to cool off. Tied at end of regular time, the tightly-contested game went into overtime. It ended in a 2-2 tie.

Grid Magnates Ignore Pres.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17 (INS)—The so-called "secret meeting" of team owners of the National Professional Football League, begun yesterday, resumed today with the purpose of the get-together still a matter of guesswork, although the general impression was the moguls were discussing the naming of a high commissioner for their circuit.

The only public reason the owners would give for the meeting was that "steps are being taken to do something about the national defense emergency." However, nobody took that explanation too seriously, especially since nothing could be done on that proposition anyhow because the gathering was not an official meeting.

The president of the league, Carl Storck of Dayton, O., was not present nor was he invited. To make the meeting official, it would have had to be called by the league president, according to the league's constitution.

George Halas, owner-coach of the Chicago Bears, came closest to explaining the meeting when he said steps were being taken to revise the league constitution.

CALDER'S IRON RULE MAY RUIN LEAGUE

By BILL GRIMES

At this time, any internal dissension among the governors of the National Hockey League, such as exploded recently in New York and caused Pres. W. Weston Adams to quit the monthly meeting in a rage, easily can develop into a serious situation for the Calder organization.

In the past, the N. H. L. has "high-jacked" many amateur players. In the old days it framed any number of top-notcher simon pures to make them turn professional.

But the cold blooded, bare faced tactics the N. H. L. governors resorted to in the claim of the Bruins for Angus Cameron, an outstanding Regina amateur, against the New York Rangers was the most brutal job ever perpetrated on a player or a club.

There isn't the slightest doubt in the mind of your operative that the N. H. L. gave the Bruins a "treatment."

LAID OFF "C. F."

During the years C. F. Adams was operating the Bruins, the N. H. L. tried to give him the "business" on a few occasions. He was such bad news that the governors soon laid off and selected a milder and less courageous victim.

Little did the governors of the N. H. L. figure "Westie" Adams was a chip off the old block. Young Adams hadn't made a practice of going to the mat with each and every opponent of whatever legislation he had attempted. He's a milder type than his father but apparently just as dangerous when riled.

Pres. Weston Adams will be fined $1000 for divulging what transpired during the New York meeting. But Adams believes he was within his rights.

He's pledged to get the best possible hockey talent for Boston. He realizes the Bruins must have beaten the Rangers by a country mile when they notified Pres. Calshot. It was a picture play and the crowd went wild.

Hardly had they settled back in their seats when Lynn Patrick got his two goals, the first going in off Jack Crawford's skate and the second aimed squarely at the corner of the net.

The draw increased Boston's undefeated streak to nine games, four wins and five draws.

150 Entered In 'Y' Meet

More than 150 athletes will compete in the 25th anniversary Open Handicap meet at the Boston Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night.

Hall and Dugger of Tufts are expected to compete. The Boston College freshmen will meet the Worcester Academy mile relay team. In the 300 James Walsh of Newton and Joe Murphy of the Boston Y and former Holy Cross star are the leading entries. Harlan Woods of the B. A. A. leads the field in the 1000.

Pacino's Reputation Periled by Brown

By WALTER KILEY

Roxbury Larry Pacino's reputation as one of the finest amateur middleweights ever developed in the East has spread to the Pacific Coast.

As a result the Californians are plotting deep, dark designs to stop the Bostonian when the sectional All-America champions of the East, Mid West and California battle in the National All-America title carnival at Boston Garden, on Monday, January 27.

"We've heard all about your Pacino, and we've read of his sensational knockout victories in the New England and Eastern tournaments," writes Trainer Art Martell of the Californian team.

"But all those professional fight managers and promoters of the East may not be so eager to sign up Pacino after they see what our Alphonse Brown does to him.

"None of us knew much about Brown before our tournament opened out here. To us he was just another Los Angeles schoolboy trying to make good.

"But when he knocked out one after another of our best middleweights and finally took two of our favorites in a row, we sat up and took notice.

"The youngster hits like an Army mule, and defensively he's perfect. Colorful, too. We honestly consider him a great professional prospect. You might advise your Larry Pacino not to become too confident.

"We've been led to believe that Pacino can't take solid blows to the stomach. Well, Mr. Brown will test that theory and, if our information is correct, you can kiss Mr. Pacino good-by."

Eddie Sierras is the California lightweight, and is described by Martell as a "two-fisted, aggressive willing prospect."

"Sierras is a Bakersfield, Cal., farmhand, his muscles and chest highly developed by years of pushing the plow.

"As a member of a large family, with five brothers older and five more younger, his has been a case of fighting from birth for his daily existence.

BUSY AS ARMSTRONG

"His home-town folks were so tickled by Sierras chance of making the trip to the Boston Nationals that they took up a fund to pay Steve Sterlich to manage him. Sterlich is a former wrestler of repute who has more recently met with conspicuous success with amateur boxers."

Of the entire California team, Martell waxes loud over Robert Daniels, 20-year-old San Francisco welterweight, who probably will be called upon to face Davie "Golden Boy" Andrews of Lowell.

"Critics of the Bay Region rate Daniels the nearest thing to Henry Armstrong they've ever seen. He is handled by Billy Wells, former British champion," writes Martell, "and the way in which he stopped practically every opponent in the San Francisco and Pacific Coast finals speaks volumes for his Boston victory chances."

With no ties other than his investment in the Bruins, Pres. Weston Adams could step out of the N. H. L. with a pretty profit. So he's just about the last person Frank Calder and the N. H. L. governors should try to push around.

As for another N. H. L. club coming here, we're not so certain the Boston Garden would entertain such a proposition. Times have changed since the Bruins outgrew the Arena. True, professional hockey defrays some of the Garden's overhead, but no longer is it the largest contributor. The various ice shows are the breadwinners today.

• • •

If the N. H. L. should crash, James Norris will be left holding the bag. And, opinions to the contrary notwithstanding the N. H. L. is by no means the stable business the general public is led to believe it is.

COX TO MEET ANGEL

The wrestling match of the year—the weird looking Angel, champion of the world, against Joe Cox, wild and woolly Kansan—will take place next Wednesday night at the Boston Arena and a percentage of the receipts will be donated by Paul Bowser to the fund that is being raised to aid infantile paralysis victims, it was announced yesterday by Bowser.

The local mat mogul clinched the bout yesterday after convincing the Angel and his manager-interpreter, Karl Pojello, that Cox is the front ranking challenger right now. And, according to Bowser, they took a lot of convincing.

B. C. Sextet After 8th Win

Boston College's great hockey team will be gunning for its eighth straight conquest when it meets powerful Dartmouth in a most important college clash at the Arena tonight.

For the visiting Green Indians the game will mark an opportunity to gain revenge for the only setback they have received this season—a 4-3 defeat which Boston College inflicted during the Christmas holidays at Rye, N. Y.

Led by Capt. Fred Maloon, a Belmont boy, the Dartmouth squad includes more than one "local" lad. Important members of the latter group include Waltham's famed gridiron great, Johnny Krol, and Framingham's Harry O'Connor.

Krol, a defenseman, and O'Connor, a right wing, received their early hockey training in the Bay State Interscholastic League which operates weekly at the Arena.

Bobby Mee, Boston College's talented defenseman, will be at his regular post when the Eagles take the ice this evening.

By JACK CONWAY

NEW YORK, JAN. 17—Hammering Henry Armstrong will try to prove a champion can come back and regain his lost title when he clashes with Fritzie Zivic in a 15-round bout in the New York Garden tonight. Other champions have tried to do so and failed, but Armstrong believes he will be able to shatter ring tradition.

FRITZIE ZIVIC

As a champion, Armstrong was unusual. At different times in his spectacular career he won three world's titles. He was world's featherweight, lightweight and welterweight champions at the same time. He packed on weight quickly and finally ended by losing the last of his titles to Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburgh welterweight.

Armstrong entered the boxing game when the sport needed a top attraction in addition to Joe Louis.

Armstrong had boxed in various parts of the country without scoring any great success. He finally arrived in Los Angeles without funds, and went to a local gym for a workout.

The little colored flash then got the break that made him a triple champion. Eddie Mead was in the gym at the time. Eddie had managed Joe Lynch of New York when the latter was world's bantamweight champion, and he knows all the answers in the boxing game.

Mead was impressed by Armstrong's speed and skill, and after the workout he signed Henry, borrowing the money from Al Jolson.

Armstrong Fastest Human in Ring

I RECEIVED MY first peek at Armstrong the night he won the world's welterweight crown from Barney Ross. Armstrong swarmed all over Ross, beating him back against the ropes with furious left and right hand punches.

Armstrong threw more punches in that bout than had ever been tossed by a welterweight in a 15-round engagement, according to timing devices at the ringside.

Armstrong never bothered much with a defense. He relied upon his speed and attack to keep himself from getting injured.

It was injuries that finally brought about Armstrong's defeat in the Zivic bout. Henry's eyes had been pounded by ring rivals who eventually were beaten. The blows had worn away the protective skin above his eyes, and as a result Armstrong cut easily.

In the Zivic bout, Armstrong was badly cut over the eyes from the tenth round on. Only courage enabled him to go the full distance. At the bell at the end of the fifteenth round, Armstrong collapsed.

Since then Henry has had his wounds cared for and his eyes treated. The doctors say he will be his old self tonight. If he is, he has a good chance of winning, but if his eyes cut easily once Zivic starts pounding him with punches, the tussle may not even go the distance.

Armstrong Has Protected Ring Earnings

WHEN EDDIE MEAD managed Joe Lynch and in later years when he directed Patsy Pirroni and other first rank boxers, he was one of the toasts of Broadway. Eddie liked life and the night spots, and he spent his money as fast as he earned it.

Old Man Experience taught Mead a lesson, and when he got Armstrong into the big money he changed his mode of living. He became a home man. He saved part of his own earnings, while he also saw that Armstrong set aside money from each of his bouts into a trust fund. The result is Armstrong today has more than $50,000 in a trust fund, and he owns considerable California real estate. There should never be an occasion to run a benefit for Hammering Henry.

"If I lose to Zivic I shall quit the ring," said Armstrong. "I have safeguarded my financial future, and I would not wish to box if I did not believe I could beat the best men of my weight. It would be foolish for me to risk injury."

Spoken like a champion. I was with Tex Rickard and Jack Dempsey in a New York hotel suite when the old Manassa Mauler told Rickard he would not accept a third bout in New York with Gene Tunney.

"Your end of the purse would amount to $750,000, said Rickard, "as I think the bout over the 15-round route would draw close to $3,000,000."

"I don't want it, Tex," went on Dempsey. "Tunney has the boxing style that will always beat me.

"The other night I was trying to read a sports talk at a radio station in Newark, and everything went blank on me. I am worried about my eyes."

Dempsey never entered the ring again, and his decision was the correct one. He might have suffered an injury in a third bout with Tunney that would have left him blind for life. Then what good would the extra $750,000 have been to him in the way of giving him real happiness?

It is always well to know when to stop in any line of sports. Especially in the boxing game.

McCarthy Eyes Flag

Gordon. I'll say this; I can always find a spot for so good a man as Gordon—a spot where he can play every day."

Asked if he thought Gordon could play third base, he said:

"Who thinks Red Rolfe is through? We still consider him our third baseman. No, I can't say what may develop between now and the middle of April. I wish I knew. Some of our lads may be in the Army by that time."

McCarthy's strongest reason for suspecting the Yanks are once more pennant bound is bound up in his pitching juveniles.

"There are nine of them," he says, "and they've all been winners with Double A teams. We ought to get at least three starters out of that crowd; maybe more. Depends on how the older fellows go."

McCarthy doesn't think Red Ruffing is ready to join Ted Lyons and Lefty Grove as "Sunday pitchers."

"Far from it," insists Joe, "Ruffing needs plenty of work to keep in shape. He couldn't get it pitching only once a week. Don't forget he lost a lot of tough games last spring when we couldn't score for him. Chubby Dean shut him out and beat him 2 to 1 and both times Red gave up only five hits. No, I'm counting on Ruffing.

"I believe Gomez has something left for the Yankees. His trouble last season was in his back, not his arm. He still has that fast one. He showed it to us a few times late last summer. Don't know how how often he can throw it, but you never saw a pitcher whose arm was gone and who could still throw a smoke-ball."

How did McCarthy happen to snatch Ken Sylvestri from the White Sox?

"Well," says Joe, "he's a left handed batter, and he hits a long ball. He got up one day as a pinch hitter and delivered a home run that beat us. He did the same thing against Johnny Babich of the A's. We needed a third catcher, and at the Stadium we can use left handed hitters who can pull the ball."

Does McCarthy think the Yankees need another outfielder who bats right-handed?

"Maybe not," he says. "We still have plenty of right handed hitters in our infield. The balance will still be there with five outfielders who bat left-handed.

"After all, left handed power is what we need most at the Stadium. Right handed hitters we might get from other clubs are no better than our own or those we can bring up."

ARMSTRONG 7-5 TO UNSEAT ZIVIC

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (AP)—The largest crowd of the indoor fight season, possibly 18,000, is expected to watch Henry Armstrong try to take his welterweight title back from Fritzie Zivic tonight in Madison Square Garden.

This will be Henry's first scrap since he went down to unexpected defeat by Zivic last October, and it is tonight or never for the busy little Negro who not so long ago held three championships simultaneously.

If Zivic trounces him again, then it's adios to one of the greatest of modern fighting men.

So much, at least, has been gathered from Henry's conversation. He has plenty of money for a fellow of simple tastes, accumulated in as furious and as crowd-pleasing a career as any fighter ever lived through.

Henry, however, would like to retire with one title. It is a sort of monument that all fighters aspire to.

JOHNSTON PICKS ZIVIC

Though Armstrong will go into tonight's 15-rounder a 7-5 favorite in the wagering, he is by no means an overwhelming choice of those who qualify as experts.

Such an old stager as James Joy Johnston, for instance, has predicted that Zivic will wear Armstrong down and knock him out by the tenth.

There's a wide diversity of opinion because no one knows how near Armstrong comes to being the superb little savage he was a year ago. Henry has gone over the hill, but how far?

In their other fight Armstrong played out in the closing rounds, and Zivic gave him a bad beating. At the final bell Henry was on the floor, exhausted and nearly blinded.

Since then Armstrong has undergone an operation to remove the scar tissue around his eyes. He has rested longer than ever before and devoted himself to building back his resources. He believes he has succeeded.

THAT JENKINS BOUT

Watching him train, however, some experts have imagined they detected a change in little perpetual motion.

However, if a reason is demanded, it becomes a painful duty to recall Zivic's recent performance against Lew Jenkins, the lightweight champion. Fritzie was extremely lucky to earn a draw, and if Armstrong can't beat that kind of fighting he ought to retire.

BULLETIN

Armstrong scaled 140½, approximately two pounds less than he weighed when he lost the crown to Zivic last October.

Forest Hills Sisters Enter Skate Derby

The Sullivan sisters of Forest Hills, Granny, aged 22, and Mary, 18, enjoy the distinction of being the first feminine entrants in the 1941 Silver Skates Derby.

Granny will compete in the girls' senior championship, Mary in the intermediate division, when the big Boston Garden classic rolls around on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 16.

Accompanying the signed blanks of the pretty Sullivan girls, both avid speed skaters, was another from Dot Walsh of West Roxbury, aged 18, their companion skater.

Entries are really flocking in to the Derby editor. The largest early entry in the six-year history of the great event has been recorded to date.

Among the early birds are Edward Delaney, 15, Worcester; Robert Cameron, 13, Revere; George Doig, 11, Everett; Joe Mullen, 15, Jamaica Plain; Dom Taverna, 13, Watertown; John Payne, 14, Worcester; Jack McCabe, 16, Roslindale; George Shepard, 15, Wilmington; Hugh Bunte, 11, Newbury st., Boston; Sumner Bloomberg, 13, Brookline.

Others are Marvin Forguites, 17, Hyde Park; John Murphy, 14, Dorchester; Donald LeBlanc, 15, Worcester; Paul Dannahy, 13, West Roxbury; Don Burke, 15, Newton; Walter McDonald, 16, Medford; Donald Jackson, 15, Somerville; Harold Sonenshein, 17, Malden; Fred Guinasso, Jr., 13, Charter st., Boston; Norma Rosenthal, 16, Malden; Jack Manning, 13, Worcester; Leland Burns, 13, South Weymouth; Wesley Orchard, 12, Malden; Paul Wanionek, 11, Boston.

In answer to an inquiry from Donald Jackson of Somerville, let us repeat that skates of any kind are acceptable in the Silver Skates Derby races, be they racing, hockey, fancy or just plain screw-on or clamp-on skates. Therefore Donald and his hockey skates will fill the bill very nicely.

SKI SCRIBBLINGS
BY "TAP" GOODENOUGH

DOWNHILL RUNNERS DIVING DOWNWARD . . . Sslalom racers schussing and swerving . . . Cross-country competitors poling and pushing . . . Jumpers soaring serenely skyward . . . Flashing skis and smoking snow! . . . Add these all together, and you'll find the first Four-Event Ski Tournament of the season tomorrow and Sunday at the Laconia-Gilford Belknap Mts. Recreational Area . . . This meet is sponsored by the Winnipesaukee Ski Club, and entries have been received from Yale, U. of N. H., Dartmouth Outing Club, M. I. T., Chisholm Ski Club, Black and Blue Trail Smashers, and others . . . Thrills and spills will be in plenty!

Recreational skiers should find ample sport this week-end. Skiing ranges from fair to good on all the slopes of Northern New England, and if trails at high altitudes receive the snow that is forecast, fast and good running will result . . . Let's go skiing!

Today through Sunday are the days set for observing the 25th anniversary of the Newport Winter Carnival at Newport, N. H. . . . N. E. Sled Dog Club races, skiing and skating competitions, and a snow ball will highlight this traditional winter event . . .

Another Winter Carnival tops the menu in Maine this week-end, the Abenaki Ski Club at Livermore Falls holding its second annual affair. Closely contested ski races for clubs will feature the program . . .

At North Conway, N. H., the Eastern Slope Ski Club is conducting its invitation club team slalom for men and women on Sunday. A large field is expected to face the flags . . .

SKI SPORTRAIT

A real veteran of the hickories and a true pioneer of the sport is BJARNE JOHANSEN, known to hundreds of skiers as "Barney" . . . His nice ski shop, "Ski Import," is located at 186 Friend st., near the North Station, and many an enthusiast passing by in a hurry to catch a train often misses that train because some skiing accessory in the window catches his eye! . . .

Barney first saw skis in his native country of Norway, where he started to ski almost before he was able to walk. A versatile athlete this expert jumped in open ski meets for the Lillestrom Sports Club of his home town, and played soccer for the organization in the summer, competing against the best teams in Europe . . .

He landed in Boston about 11 years ago, continuing his sports activities for the Norwegian Club which won the league soccer championship . . . "And soccer in the summer," says Johansen, "is great for ski legs!" . . .

As a ski jumper, Barney placed fourth three times in the state championships held at Lancaster. It was at this meet in 1935 that he met with a most unique and unfortunate accident. Trying out a new wax he had made, Barney climbed to the top for a trial leap. Poised birdlike for a moment, he swooped down the slide, but reacting the take-off his skis stuck on the very edge. Thrown off balance our jumper dived dizzily downward, making a perfect landing on his head! Although he broke two ribs and blacked an eye, Barney was chiefly irked at the fact that he ripped his pants!

The maestro has flown his winged boards at all the big meets in the country, including Brattleboro, Vt.; Rumford, Me.; Salisbury, Ct.; Berlin and Laconia, N. H.

His ski shop was opened in 1934, and business has shown a definite increase so far this season. Repairing skis keeps his skill at work day and night . . .

Recreational skiing is all that Barney has time for now, and he usually takes the Snow Train every Sunday. He loves spring skiing and continues the sport through May in Tuckerman Ravine . . .

"Skiing is growing bigger each year," declares Johansen. "The sport is here to stay like golf and tennis. This country has some great young skiers now developing who will soon be the best in the world. And when that happy day arrives for another Olympics, our ski team will top 'em all!"

Barney serves as assistant treasurer for the Wildcats Ski Club of Boston, and helps the lads in many ways . . He is an inspired worker for the sport of skiing!

SKI CLUB SCHUSSES

Dick Bradley of the Wildcats is giving ski lessons at Mt. Pero Lodge in Plymouth, N. H., every Sunday. He will continue to race as an F. I. S. amateur . . .

The Innitou Ski Runners will hold a Third Class proficiency test at their Horn Pond Mt. slope in Woburn on Sunday at 2:30 . . . The club's big jumping meet is scheduled for Feb. 9, says Bob Johnson, newly-elected president . . .

A team of racers will represent the Oshoni Ski Club of Boston at the Ossipee Winter Carnival Feb. 2nd in the open slalom for Outing Clubs. Ray Howlett is expected to turn in a fast run . . .

In Maine, the Pleasant Mountain Ski Club of Bridgton will sponsor a sanctioned Class C time trial Sunday . . .

Wendall (Chummy) Broomhall, cross-country ace for Rumford's Chisholm Outing Club, is off to a good start for another season of peak performance. Chummy led the field in the nine mile cross-country trek at Franconia, N. H., last Saturday, then danced nine more miles at the Town Hall in the evening. What a man! . . .

The Bauneg Beg Ski Club at Sanford is doing a grand job. A slope and tow have been developed, and a ski hut constructed . . .

SKI SCHOOL SCOOPS

At Plymouth, N. H., Fred Nosworthy's All-American Ski School is attracting many pupils. Fred, a stylist on skis, has his assistants attired in white caps, red sweaters, and blue trousers! He is also holding proficiency tests for all who wish to essay them . . .

Still another branch of the Oscar Cyr Ski School has been located at the Williams Ski House, Williamstown, Mass. Classes are held daily on Sheep Hill . . . Last week, under Coach Cyr, the Williams ski team ran the Thunderbolt Trail to obtain some real practice .

Marion McComb, only girl member of the Franconia Ski School, is rapidly becoming a full-fledged instructress under the guidance of Peter Gabriel . . .

The U. S. E. A. S. A. has announced that its school for amateur instructors will be conducted by the Dartmouth Outing Club in Hanover, commencing next Tuesday, and continuing through Saturday. Walter Prager will be in charge . . .

SKI SHOTS

Regular dances are held every Saturday night with leading orchestras at the dance hall of the Intervale Playgrounds, outside North Conway, N. H. Ski clothes go here, and there is plenty of fun for skiers . . .

The open slope on Mt. Eustis at Littleton, N. H., is one of the best illuminated in the country. Lighting is arranged so cleverly that the rays seem to follow skiers up and down, casting no shadows . . .

Want Gladchuk For Hein's Job

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (INS)—Len Barnum, veteran New York Giants backfield star, has been traded to the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Professional League for Chet Gladchuk, Boston College center who, as yet, hasn't announced whether he will play pro ball next season.

Actually the trade is Barnum for negotiation rights on the bruising center, who reportedly has said he will play "if I get a chance with a good club."

Giant officials indicated Gladchuk will replace Mel Hein, All-League center for the past ten years, who likely will devote most of next season to assisting Head Coach Steve Owen.

Winding across desert sands, these hundreds of Italians are headed in the direction of the vital Suez Canal . . . but not in the manner originally planned when Fascist legions invaded Egypt as the first step in a drive to capture the canal. These men are prisoners; some of the 40,000 captured by the British in Egypt and Libya.

Routs Thief

Faced by an armed bandit after she parked her car in the rear of her Holden Green, Cambridge, apartment, Mrs. Gertrude Diederich, 25, disregarded his threats and screamed for help. Bandit took to his heels, Mrs. Diederich called police and as a result of her accurate description, a Somerville youth was picked up and held.
